SKIN CANCER.
Several years ago I was called to see a colored woman who had a malignant form of cancer on her foot. The cancer grew worse under the prescribed treatment, and the toes and one side of the foot were at length eaten entirely away. The patient could not have survived much longer, but I commenced the use of Swift's Specific, and it cured her sound well. That was three years ago, and there has been no return of the disease. I regard Swift's Specific a most excellent medicine for blood diseases, as its tendency is to drive out the poison.

Blaine and Pauncefote in Constant Consultation—Amicable Adjustment.

INDIAN DEPREDATION CLAIMS

The Measure That Is to Provide for Their Final Adjudication—Congressional Forecast—Senator Dolph Meets a Loss.

WASHINGTON, March 2.—[OREGONIAN office, corner Fourteenth street and Pennsylvania avenue.] Major Powell talks upon the subject of irrigation every Saturday night in the rooms of the Western Congressional Association. The members of congress who are generally interested in irrigation attend these lectures and become more and more convinced that congress should take some action looking to the reclamation of arid lands, but the effect of these lectures does not extend to the Eastern and Southern congressmen, who will vote on the question when it is brought before congress. All the talk this session will result in little but agitation. Small sums may be voted to continue the surveys and to extend surveys to states that have not yet been considered, but as to getting any considerable sum for actual work there is little or no prospect of success. The great demand upon the treasury at this session will hold back all bills which are regarded as appropriations for useless improvements, and that is the way irrigation is regarded by many of the congressmen. There are so many states which have vast vast quantities of land which they believe are fertile and should be settled before the arid Western plains are reclaimed at the government expense. It cannot be said that the men most interested in irrigation are doing all they can for it—though the members of the senate committee, Senators Casey and Moody, have matters well in hand and expect to get a liberal appropriation, but the irrigationists, as a whole, are not moving with that activity and earnestness that accomplishes great results. They have too many matters of their own to look after—too much in the way of local legislation. Add to this mountain size pile of appropriations asked, the demand for a reduction in the tariff, and there is an explanation why irrigation will rest quietly for some time to come.

Notwithstanding the positive character of the news received from Russia and Canada in regard to pending negotiations between those countries and the United States for the settlement of the disputed questions connected with the Behring sea and North Atlantic fisheries, the most persistent inquiry of the authorities at Washington has failed so far to elicit any information on the subject. The officials of the state department are even more reticent than usual, but outside of the state department, however, it is very well known that this government is in constant communication with the government of Great Britain with a view to the settlement of the Canadian fisheries question, and [illegible] negotiating with that government and incidentally with the Russian government, for an acknowledgment of the jurisdiction of the United States in the Behring sea. In regard to the former question it is understood that the negotiations have proceeded so far toward a settlement on a basis satisfactory to both governments; that the operation of the modus vivendi allowing American fishermen license to purchase bait has been extended indefinitely without any documentary formalities. The negotiations are conducted entirely between Secretary Blaine and Sir Julian Pauncefote. Sir Charles Tupper has no diplomatic relation with them, but he is thoroughly familiar with the questions under consideration, and his visit to the capital at this time is understood to be for the purpose of aiding the British minister in the pending efforts for their settlement, and to see at the same time that the rights of the British colony are fully recognized and protected.

Representative Hermann, as chairman of the committee on Indian depredation claims, with a sub-committee, was in consultation yesterday with the secretary of the interior, the commissioner of Indian affairs and later on with the attorney general, respecting the bill now nearly ready to report to the house, providing for the final adjudication of Indian depredation claims and for the creation of a distinct tribunal for this purpose. The secretary of the treasury gave the subject his attention last week and returned an earnest recommendation for this proposed legislation, especially favoring such provisions of the bill as refer to the co-operation of the treasury department.

Congress apparently has settled down to a strictly business basis, and is making rapid progress in the consideration and disposition of legislation. The senate will duplicate this week the programme of last week. In case a vote is reached on the Blair bill before the end of the week, Sherman will move to have the bill declaring trusts to be unlawful taken up. He will be antagonized by Frye, who will ask that the Pacific railroad funding bill be made the order of the day. In the house the election contest of Fetherstone vs. Cate will probably be pushed to a conclusion Monday. Tuesday and Wednesday is set apart by a special order for action upon the public buildings bills. The pension appropriation bill may come up in the middle of the week.

Senator Dolph was called to New York on business early last week, and after transacting it he returned to Washington Thursday afternoon. He had no occasion to use his wallet until his return, when, upon examination, he discovered that a valuable bond had been either lost or stolen. This fact was reported to the railroad officials, and an investigation is now in progress.

Representative Wilson and Delegate Dubois, both members of the Indian committee, state that there is no doubt about the passage of the bill opening the Coeur d'Alene Indian reservation in Idaho.

THE PAN-AMERICAN CONFERENCE.

Arbitration of Differences Will Be Recommended—The Silver Problem.

WASHINGTON, March 2.—The delegates to the international American conference are beginning to talk about the final adjournment, which will probably take place in April. Most of all the committees have made reports, and several of them have been adopted. Others are nearly ready to report to the conference. The committee on arbitration has agreed to recommend the adoption of that method for settling international differences, but has not yet arrived at an agreement on details. The committee on the monetary convention will make two reports, one of which will recommend the coinage of common silver dollars to be legal tender in commercial transactions between citizens of the several nations. The other report, prepared and presented by Coolidge, of the United States delegation, will recommend the issue of certificates by the United States upon any bullion that may be deposited in the United States treasury by the republics of the Central and South American states.

Vice-President Morton and party arrived to-day, and will remain until to-morrow.

A TUNNEL FIVE MILES LONG.

Senator Stewart Offers a Plan to Do Away With Snow Blockades.

WASHINGTON, March 2.—[Special Telegram.]—Senator Stewart, of Nevada, has a novel idea to overcome future snow blockades over the Sierra Nevada mountains on the line of the Central Pacific railroad. He proposes soon to offer an amendment to the Pacific railroad funding bill, providing for a tunnel through the Sierra Nevada mountains, to avoid the deep snow belt. The tunnel commencing in Cold Spring canyon above Truckee on the east slope will strike on the California side below the heavy snow line and on the sunny side of the mountain; but in order to keep down below the deep snow line it will be necessary to run several other tunnels through mountain points. The length of the main tunnel will be about five miles and the aggregate length of the other tunnels five miles more. If this were done snow sheds could be dispensed with and the road run at all seasons of the year. The new line would be at least 1000 feet lower than the present road. Stewart says if Nevada is still to continue to pay heavy freights to discharge its obligations it ought to have a reliable and convenient outlet at all seasons of the year, and that he is unwilling to see a railroad funding bill passed that will in no way benefit his state. The Central Pacific was a national enterprise for postal and military purposes, but without such tunnels the present winter has demonstrated that it is inadequate to accomplish the purposes originally designed. Stewart contends that the expense of constructing tunnels should be taken out of the annual payments to be made to the government under the provisions of the funding bill.

BLUE GRASS TO SPEAKER REED.

If He Will Consent to Lie in Kentucky His Grave Will be Kept Green.

LOUISVILLE, March 2.—The following letter was sent to-night to Representative Caruth, of Kentucky, by Jay F. Durham, president of the Blue-grass club, of Louisville, in reply to Speaker Reed's letter:

"Your telegram announcing Speaker Reed's declination to attend the Blue-grass dinner received. The speaker's letter to you, sent out by the Press Association, has, I think, been read. Please say to the speaker that every assurance will be given him that he will not be killed on his first visit, though in case he should decide to die out here special attention would be paid by the entire membership of the club to keeping his grave green. This can easily be done by burying him beneath blue grass. As the club has a code of rules for its government which is in harmony with general parliamentary law and the constitution of the United States, it might be that these are facts which have deterred him from accepting."

THE FUR SEAL LEASE.

A Disappointed Corporation Files a Protest With the Government.

WASHINGTON, March 2.—[Special Telegram.]—The Atlantic and Pacific Trading Company has filed a protest against the fur seal lease being awarded to the North American Commercial Company. The protest alleges that the bid of the Tenis-Mills syndicate is illegal, inasmuch as it was accompanied by two other bids, both of which were higher than the one accepted. Other legal points are made. The protest is signed by Attorney-General Michener, of Indiana, and W. W. Dudley as attorneys for the corporation.

BANK ROBBER KILLED.

He Fooled With Two Officers With Winchester Rifles.

MERIDEN, KAS., March 2.—"I'm a slick." Telegraph Operator Taylor heard those words addressed by a stranger last night while he was receiving a message at the railway station. He paid no attention to the remark until he had completed the message on which he was engaged, which was a description of the man who had robbed the Valley Falls bank yesterday. The operator looked up and nearly lost his breath when he saw standing before him the very man described in the dispatch. He did not reveal the recognition, and the stranger enquired the next train for Atchison, and asked where he could put up for the night. The operator directed him to a hotel where the "slicker" took a room without registering to be called at 5 o'clock in the morning in time for the Atchison train. Local police officers, Smith and Summerfield, who had also received instructions from Valley Falls to arrest any suspect, were informed by the operator of the presence of the stranger at the hotel. Arming themselves with Winchester rifles they went to the hotel, and waited until 12 o'clock, and then going to the hotel office acquainted the proprietor with their intention to arrest the guest. The bell boy was sent to the stranger's room with a message at 5:30 o'clock, that it was time to get up to catch the Atchison train. When the stranger descended to the office he was confronted by the officers, with Winchester rifles pointed squarely at his breast. He never quivered, but looked inquiringly around. "Throw up your hands," Officer Smith said. The stranger seemed to realize the situation, but instead of obeying the command, thrust a hand into either side pocket of his overcoat to draw a revolver. Both Winchesters were discharged instantly at his breast. The stranger fell dead with one bullet through his heart, and another through the right lung. The coroner was notified immediately and before noon a verdict was returned exonerating the officers of criminality in having caused the death of the bank robber, defense being their excuse. The stolen money was discovered on the body. The outlaw was positively identified, from a registered receipt dated at Burlington, Kans., as the Robertson. The money receipted for had been payable to one D. S. Smith, at Ottawa, Kansas.

DEPEW'S GOOD SENSE.

He Will Hold on to the Presidency That He Already Has.

NEW YORK, March 1.—[Special Telegram.]—Chauncey M. Depew has given a unique reply to an abrupt question from another reporter as to whether or not he would accept the presidency of the United States. Depew smiled broadly on the questioner and then said: "I ascribe what little success I have had in life to my habit of never letting go anything until I had hold of something better. I have the presidency of the New York Central road. The presidency of the United States is something only one man in 65,000,000 can get. I have no intention of dropping what I have and I am quite satisfied with it. If I were to resign the presidency of this railroad in order to try to get the nomination in '92, I would do two things. First, I would insult the 750,000 railroad men of this country by admitting there was a disgrace attached to a man because he was in the railroad business, and in the second place, I would announce, by resigning from the presidency of the New York Central in deference to the alleged political prejudice against a railroad man, that I felt sure of getting the republican nomination, and that would kill any possible chance I might have."

THE CHEROKEE BOOM.

Settlers Preparing to Locate as Soon as It Is Opened.

GUTHRIE, I. T., March 2.—The proposed early delivery of the Cherokee strip to home seekers is attracting large numbers of boomers. Walnut river, from Arkansas City to the northern boundary of the strip, is already lined with boomers, and arrivals occur every day. The rush into the Cherokee land will equal that into Oklahoma. At this place, the southern boundary of the strip, boomers are beginning to arrive in great numbers, choosing the banks of Cottonwood river as temporary homesteads. The recent "Norther" with its severe cold caused some suffering among the poorly housed people, but no fatalities are reported. The boomers who camped around Guthrie will have a double chance of securing free land, one piece at the Cherokee strip and the other at the Iowa reservation. The Iowa Indians recently determined to take up land in severalty and sell the remainder to the government. When the Indians have taken the alloted amount of land there will yet remain 20,000 acres of land quite as fertile as any yet opened to settlement in the southwest.

World's Skating Championship.

MINNEAPOLIS, March 2.—Hugh McCormick to-day defeated Alexander Paulsen in a ten mile skating race at White Bear lake. The race was for the world's championship, $500 a side and Paulsen's championship medal. McCormick's time was 37.9, with Paulsen one-third of a mile behind.

A BLIZZARD STRIKES NEW ENGLAND

Snow Accompanies a Severe Northeast Gale—New Jersey Included.

FLORIDA ORANGE CROP RUINED

The Southern States Get Their First Touch of Real Wintry Weather the Present Season—Snow in Georgia.

NEW YORK, March 2.—A blinding snow storm set in at 9 o'clock, accompanied by a brisk south wind. Many accidents, due to falls on the slippery sidewalks, were recorded by the various police stations and hospitals before midnight. At midnight the snow was still falling.

The snow has blocked the street car tracks pretty effectually and even the elevated railroads are suffering, the blinding snow, making it necessary to run slow. On the Brooklyn bridge the trainmen and police suffered severely. The ferry boats on East and North rivers are compelled to proceed with the greatest care.

BOSTON, March 2.—A heavy storm has been raging since early afternoon. About seven inches of snow has fallen. Advices from points along the coast of Cape Cod report the worse storm of the winter accompanied with a severe northwest gale.

At Newport, R. I., the storm is the heaviest that has visited the city in years.

Dispatches from Portsmouth, N. H., and New Bedford, Mass, also report heavy snow falls.

SANDY HOOK, March 2.—A severe snow storm is raging to-night all along the New Jersey coast which reminds one of the fearful blizzard of two years ago. The wind is blowing forty miles an hour from the northwest and the snow is drifting high.

NEW HAVEN, Conn., March 2.—The storm here is increasing in fury and violence and a high wind prevails. Six inches of snow has fallen at midnight.

THE STORM IN THE SOUTH.

Real Winter Weather at Last—The Florida Orange Crop Ruined.

NORFOLK, Va., March 2.—The blizzard which has been raging in the South and West the past few days, struck this section yesterday morning, beginning with rain and a decided drop in temperature which continued until this time with increasing energy. It has grown into about the first touch of really wintry weather we have had this season. Since about 12 o'clock last night snow has been falling furiously, and except in spots which have a continuous southern exposure it has fallen to a depth of several inches.

FORT MONROE, Va., March 2.—It snowed heavy all day here, first of the season.

SAVANNAH, Ga., March 2.—The first hard freeze of the winter occurred here this morning. Ice formed and vegetation is killed. Light snows fell to-day, the first in many years.

Florida Orange Crop Destroyed by Frost.

NEW ORLEANS, March 2.—A Picayune's Pensacola, Florida, special says a killing frost occurred this morning in all probability destroying the fruit crop throughout this county. Reports from West Florida are to the effect that the fruit crop in that section is badly damaged and will probably be a total loss. Owing to the mildness of the winter all kinds of fruit were fully a month ahead of the usual time; consequently greater damage will result from the recent cold snap.

Snowstorm in Europe.

LONDON, March 3.—A severe snow storm and frost is reported in England and various parts of Europe. Among the regions so visited are Rome and Rivierra.

PERILS OF THE SEA.

Thrilling Story of the Sufferings of a Shipwrecked Captain and Crew.

NEW YORK, March 2.—Nearly every vessel which has come to this port for the past four months has brought tales of terrific weather at sea, but it is doubtful if any has reported such hardships as those endured by Captain Smith and seven sailors, who came to port a few days ago, after losing several shipmates and leaving the ill-fated British bark Meteor at the bottom of the ocean. They were twenty-three days in a gale of wind, hove to under heavy canvass. Then one of the officers and a number of ship's crew were swept overboard by high waves and drowned. They were nine days surrounded by icebergs and a field of ice over fifty miles long. The rudder was carried away and the bows and sides crushed in. Then they were rescued by a friendly steamer, just as their own vessel was about to sink from under their very feet. This is the story they tell of their sufferings. Their experience in the ice was particularly thrilling. Once, after she managed to clear the field, a passing vessel was discovered a couple of miles distant. Signals of distress were made, but the stranger sailed off, leaving the men to their fate. The vessel was leaking badly, and they had to work at the pumps constantly. Fortunately for them, a few hours later the British steamer Marengo hove in sight and took them off.

A GAME PRIZE FIGHT.

The Referee Decides It a Draw in Spite of Protest.

NEW ORLEANS, March 2.—Tommy Ward, of Cincinnati, and Charles Wilson (English) met to-day in a fight under Queensberry rules with five-ounce gloves to a finish. They fought an hour and a half, the last four rounds by lamplight, and the referee declared it a draw, with the unwilling consent of the men. In the seventeenth round the Kid got in some clever blows on Ward's mouth. The latter got desperate and fought back at close quarters. His length, reach and strong right told, and at the end of a minute's rapid exchanges the kid was groggy and nearly knocked out. He came back gamely and got the best of the next round. In the nineteenth round Ward nearly knocked the kid through the ropes with a right-hander on the neck. The men kept up a lively gait until the end of the twenty-second round which was wound up with rapid fighting on both sides, but no knock-out. The referee suggested a draw; the crowd objected, but the police cast the deciding vote in favor of it. The $400 purse was accordingly divided. The kid displayed a swollen right hand and says he broke it on the fifth round.

PETER JACKSON IN NEW YORK.

The Colored King is Modest in His Talk—Wants to Meet Corbett.

NEW YORK, March 2.—Peter Jackson, the pugilist, arrived from Baltimore this morning in company with Parson Davis. He said: "The result of the Kilrain-Corbett contest surprised me, but I do not think it was a fair test. I had expected the California Athletic Club would take some steps toward making a match between Corbett and me, but have heard nothing to that effect thus far. I have never seen Corbett, but am inclined to believe he is an exceedingly clever boxer."

"How soon do you expect to reach San Francisco?"

"Within two months I shall reach the Pacific slope and remain there until a match of some sort is made for me. On Tuesday night I shall box with Professor Donnelly, of Brooklyn, who I am told is a softy sort of a fellow."

"Is there a chance for a repetition of the Kilrain-Corbett story?"

"One can never tell what may happen. This man is a powerful fellow, possessing an excellent knowledge of ring tactics, but I shall do my best to stop him in four rounds."

HOPE STILL HELD OUT.

Some Olympia Legislators Want to Adjourn March 15.

A JOB TO LOAN THE SCHOOL FUND

Eddy's Medical Bill Met With Much Favor—The Locomotive Engineer Bill Likely to Be Defeated—Public Administrator Wanted.

OLYMPIA, March 2.—[Special Telegram.]—A committee of Eastern Washington representatives have made a canvass of the legislature to ascertain the sentiment as to final adjournment, and say that a majority of the members are in favor of adjourning on the 15th of this month. The plan is to hold three sessions daily, morning, afternoon and evening, and push important legislation to an issue. Already there is opposition to the plan. Some claim that if the legislature adjourns on the 15th the tide and school lands bills cannot be acted upon. Friends of the proposition say both of these bills can be disposed of if the legislature will take them up in a proper way. As matters stand now, each house is disinclined to act upon these important bills until the other has done something. The legislature will have been in session four months on the 6th inst., and many members are getting tired and homesick, and declare that they will resign if they have to stay much longer. They have business interests which demand their attention.

It is stated here positively to-night that Governor Ferry will sign the judgeship bill to-morrow, and will announce the appointments to the new offices immediately thereafter. Humes and Stratton are thought to be the chosen men in King. In nominating these two men to the bench the governor thinks it will be a sop to both political factions in Seattle. L. D. Campbell is believed to be the coming man in Pierce, owing to the almost brutal fight that has been made against Fremont Campbell the past two weeks. Had it not been for this attack Fremont Campbell's nomination, it is believed, would have been assured. Applegate has never been in the race. In Spokane it is thought Colonel W. W. D. Turner has the best chance of winning, but Judge Norman Buck, his competitor for the appointment, has developed remarkable strength the past few days and may carry off the judicial plum. Judge Buck is endorsed by a majority of the Spokane bar and by Patrick Henry Winston, United States district attorney. It is thought Judge Buck's nomination would have been certain had there not been some question as to the length of time he has lived in the state.

Since Sergeant-at-Arms Leiter furnished Speaker Feighan a list of those who smoked in the hall in violation of rule 56 during recess the other day the members go outside when they want to smoke. The rule has never been operative since the early part of the session, but it has now been obeyed. Sergeant Leiter made several strenuous efforts to enforce it, but to no purpose. When he would get after an offender the answer of the smoker would be, "Oh, come off, this smoke is harming no one." His only recourse then was to keep his eye open for the offenders and furnish their names to the speaker.

The principal smokers of the house are Browne of Pierce, Judson of Pierce, Grubb, Moultray, Judson of Whatcom, Geoghegan, Meade, Fandle, Cook, Hamilton, Gilchrist, Rotch, Bush, Dean, Herren, Day, Megler, Power, Robertson, Lutter and Shinn.

Mr. Browne's delight is a highly polished briar-wood pipe, of which he takes good care.

Grubb's pipe is less pretentious, but it makes just as much smoke. The Spokane representative is happy when he can sink away down in his easy chair and cock his feet upon the table while the blue wreaths of smoke circle above his head.

Herren belongs to that class of smokers who saturate themselves with nicotine by carrying an unlighted cigar in their mouths.

Megler has a strong penchant for a good cigar; likewise Dr. Power. The latter is seldom without a cigar in his mouth. He can reduce twenty to ashes in a day.

A majority of the members named smoke cigars. Rotch occasionally takes to cigarettes. When there's a long bill on third reading, he can be found on the verandah of the state house enjoying a short smoke.

Owing to the lack of accommodations, the representatives are not to be blamed for smoking in the hall when the air is sharp without. The only place they can go to smoke is in the sergeant-at-arms' room, and that is not large enough to accommodate half a dozen men.

The senate is no better off as regards accommodations, but it has no rule against smoking. Its smoking room faces the entrance to the chamber. It is a very small room, but it is crowded when there is a long, dry bill on final passage, and the lieutenant governor frequently asks, "will the sergeant-at-arms please invite the senators to come in from the highways and byways contiguous to the senate chamber." Upon the appearance of the sergeant-at-arms, the senators proceed to put their unfinished weeds where they can find them when they return. On the wall there is a small shelf, and above it is a large sheet of brown paper containing numbers. Each senator carefully deposits his cigar beneath one of these numbers, and when he is ready to resume the weed he has no trouble in identifying it.

The principal smokers of the senate are Owings, Austin, Clough, Baker, Farriss, Thompson of Pierce, Luce, Fairweather, Houghton, Snow, Wilson, Rinehart, Parkinson and Preston.

Senator Owings is thoroughly at home with his hands thrust deep into his pockets, his derby cocked and tipped slightly forward and his face screwed up to clinch the weed firmly. The senator is scrupulously neat, and something like a small thunderstorm arises when cigar ashes happen to fall on his Dolly Varden vest and roll down a figure decidedly inclined to be embonpoint.

Senator Owings imports his cigars from Boston and pays $80 a thousand for them. The manufacturer supplies private orders and does not put his brand on the market. When Senator Owings meets a man who smokes the same cigar he is as happy as a college graduate who has not seen his classmate for many a day.

Senators Fairweather and Baker smoke the best cigar on the market. Three-for-a-half are their favorites. Senator Fairweather is generous with his cigars. He fills his pockets with them when he goes to a meeting of the joint committee on revenue and taxation, of which he is chairman, and before business is proceeded with sees that all are supplied. Colonel Fairweather surprised the natives yesterday by appearing on the street with a high hat, cob pipe, an 18-inch collar and a blackthorn cane, which made him look like a Dublin dude on his way to kiss the Blarney stone. He informed a senatorial wag, who hailed him, that he intended to introduce a bill making St. Patrick's day a legal holiday.

Lieutenant-Governor Laughton smokes nothing but cigarettes. Vanity Fair is his favorite brand. When he gets tired of the proceedings he calls President pro tem Parkinson to the chair and has a quiet smoke. He never inhales the smoke. The lieutenant-governor is an adept at rolling cigarettes.

Senator Drum always carries a good supply of fragrant cigars but he never leaves the chamber to smoke while a measure is under discussion.

Austin is the only senator who carries a cigar case. None of the senators smoke pipes.

The senate committee on municipal corporations finished its labors last evening on the bill prepared with the view of curing the evils imposed by the supreme court in the recent decision in the Puyallup case. The bill divides the cities of the state into four classes. In the first class are put all the cities over 20,000 population; in the second are placed cities having from ten to twenty thousand population; in the third are placed cities having from two to ten thousand inhabitants and in the fourth class are placed all towns having over 300 population and less than 2000. The bill has been modeled after those now operative in California and Ohio. It will be introduced by the committee to-morrow.

The medical bill which Col. T. V. Eddy drafted will be introduced in the house next Tuesday by the committee on medicine and surgery. The members who have read the digest of it published in THE OREGONIAN say it is a good bill, and it is conceded that it will not be so strongly opposed as the Power bill was. A gentleman who called on Governor Ferry yesterday outlined the provisions of the new bill to him.

"What provision is made for appeals?" asked the Governor.

The visitor explained that an appeal could be taken to the superior court and thence to the Supreme court, if necessary. Governor Ferry seemed to be pleased with the bill. He asked whether it provided for subjecting physicians now in the state to examination the same as physicians who will hereafter make their homes here. When told no, he observed that it was apparently in conflict with section 12 of the Bill of Rights, which declares that—

"No law shall be passed granting to any citizen, class of citizens, or corporation other than municipal, privileges or immunities which upon the same terms shall not equally belong to all citizens or corporations."

Still, Governor Ferry said this was a delicate question, and intimated that it would not stand in the way of his approval of the bill.

There are 800 physicians in Washington. Some one has taken the trouble to hunt up their individual records, and asserts that 200 of them are quacks. Still, as Governor Ferry says, it is difficult to reach them, and the only way to protect the public is to pass a good law which will show them up.

The constitutional convention made no provision for a state coat of arms, and Adjutant-General O'Brien, N. G. W., is not satisfied with the territorial emblem, which represents a siwash sitting in the foreground with the Indian word "Alki," signifying "by and by" or "in the time to come," above her head. "Alki" is symbolical of future achievement, and the adjutant general thinks that Washington, in donning the mantle of statehood, achieved all that the word implies, and therefore the old coat of arms has become obsolete. He has suggested a new coat, which is representative of the varied natural resources and growing commerce of the new state. In the foreground is a sidewheel steamer. To the right is a farmer plowing in a field, and to the left a miner returning, with pick and shovel, to his little log cabin. In the center is a railroad train with cars marked "coal" "iron" "fruit" and "lumber." In the upper and right-hand corners are mountain and forest scenes. Many think the old territorial coat with the word "alki" eliminated would be good enough for the state.

The capital has been quiet since young Mr. Sanborn, the treasurer of the Bancroft-Whitney Company, of San Francisco, left for home. He made a three-months' stay, and became as well known as any man here. Sanborn is a jolly companion, a hail fellow well met, and the boys miss him, together with his oyster suppers, his whist-playing and his jolly laughter. The following lines have been dedicated to his memory.

No more does heaven wear azure blue,
Nor Liberty's goddess her metallic smile,
No longer the birds sing the song of the shoe,
Like syrens, the wanderer to beguile,
For Sanborn's gone.

The hummingbird has forgotten its hum,
The petite clerk her chewing gum,
The state house flag floats at half-mast,
And life's pleasures are a thing of the past,
For Sanborn's gone.

Someday Helios will shine with winsome grace,
Each star will be in its accustomed place;
The capital halls will resound with mirth,
And of unhappiness there will be a dearth
When Sanborn comes again.

A concurrent resolution introduced in the senate a few weeks ago by Senator Whalley, of Whitman, provides an amendment to section 5, article XVI, of the constitution. The section reads as follows:

"None of the permanent school fund shall ever be loaned to private persons or corporations, but it may be invested in national, state, county or municipal bonds."

The amendment proposed is to add to the section the following after the word "corporations":

"Except on first mortgage improved farm security in this state, not to exceed one-third of the appraised value of the lands."

The primary reason for offering the amendment is understood to have arisen from the desire to secure a larger rate of interest. The school fund cannot be reduced, the interest only being available. It is stated that the rate of interest on national bonds, after allowing for premiums would be only about 3 per cent. per annum. State bonds can be sold at 4 to 4½ per cent., and county and municipal bonds at but little more.

Money is now being loaned on farm security at from 10 to 20 per cent. interest. The school fund could be loaned at a rate of interest nearly double that secured on bonds, which would double the funds available for the use of schools.

The objection is that the loan could not be safely made, that Oregon lost its school fund by such loans. The objection is answered by referring to section 6, article 9, of the constitution, which indemnifies the school fund against any loss from whatever cause. Furthermore, it is argued improved farms are the basis of bonded securities and are consequently a safe security.

It is proposed to guard the loan by laws providing for making the loan through county officers, upon application by persons desiring the loan giving information in detail and appraisement of land by disinterested parties. It is further proposed to require an abstract of title, showing the land to be unincumbered and title good.

O, Eddy of Snohomish, thou whose voice is ever heard,
Proclaiming nothing in loud tones, with many a weary word,
Has't thou no mercy in thy soul, that thou should'st treat us so?
Give us a rest, O man of wind—take breath, cork up, go slow!
Remember that the session's old and drawing to its close,
And we are almost bored to death; add thou not to our woes.
To see thee get upon thy feet fills us with deepest pain,
To hear thee mouth thy ceaseless talk—Great God! He's up again!

It is expected that early next week Governor Ferry will send to the senate the name of the first state printer. O. C. White, late secretary of the territory and manager of the State Printing and Publishing Company, which is doing the state printing now, has the inside track for the place, and it is generally believed that he will get it. Governor Ferry will also announce next week the new board of regents of the state university and the board of health at Port Townsend.

Colonel Will L. Visscher, formerly editor of the Tacoma Globe, is a candidate for harbor line commissioner. A warm fight is being made upon him. His opponents charge that he has not the best reputation for sobriety, and substantiate their allegations by reference to Colonel Visscher's proboscis, which is as prominent, proportionately, as a lighthouse on a Cimmerian night, and of about the same hue and brilliancy. The doughty colonel is a late convert to republican principles. He was a war democrat, and stumped Colorado for Cleveland in 1884. He bolted Cleveland in 1888 because of his attitude toward the Grand Army.

Senator Wilson's bill prescribing the duties of locomotive engineers, which has passed the senate, will probably be defeated in the house. If it becomes a law it will prevent railroad companies obtaining engineers in case of a strike. Section 1 makes it "unlawful for any person not at this time engaged in the occupation or business of running or operating a locomotive" unless he has passed a satisfactory examination and received a certificate. Governor Ferry raised an objection to the Power medical bill because it contained a similar provision which granted one class privileges and immunities which another class could not get on the same terms.

The rest of the bill prescribes that an engineer must be 21 years old, able to read and write English, of good moral character, sober and must have had three consecutive years' experience as a locomotive fireman. The certificate of the engineer with whom he served shall be sufficient evidence of his service. It is made the duty of master mechanics or superintendents of machinery to examine applicants and give them certificates if the examination has been satisfactory.

The bill is far from perfect. If the three year provision is strictly construed it will be found that there are very few competent engineers in the state now. Beside, the certificate of the master mechanic is of no protection to either the applicant or the railroad company, and no fee is allowed the master mechanic for conducting the examination. In addition, there is no appeal or redress for any person who feels aggrieved. This was one of the governor's principal objections to Dr. Power's bill.

Colonel Patrick Henry Winston, the new United States district attorney, arrived from Spokane Falls last evening. It is said that he is here to urge the appointment of Judge Buck, as the additional superior judge of Spokane county. Colonel W. W. D. Turner, brother of Judge Turner, is Judge Buck's rival. Colonel Winston, in reply to a question, said that his business in Olympia is to attend to the transfer of causes from the supreme court to the United States court.

It was said recently that the supreme court would soon petition the legislature to be removed to Tacoma, or at least be allowed to hold sessions there. In answer to a question on this point, Chief Justice Anders said that there was no truth in the petition, but the judges, talking among themselves, had expressed a desire to be located in Tacoma or some place where they would have access to a good law library. The libraries of Olympia are small and the state library does not amount to a hill of beans. Nine times out of ten the book a man wants is gone.

Landes will introduce a bill in the senate to-morrow to create the office of public administrator in each county whose duty it shall be to take charge of the estates of decedents for which no administrators have been appointed, and which in consequence are being wasted, uncared for or lost; of the estates of decedents who have no known heirs; of estates ordered into his hands by the court, and of estates upon which letters of administration have been issued to him by the court.

Senator Long is in many respects the character of the senate. He is a middle-aged farmer and looks like a solid, hard-headed deacon of a western church, who has been accustomed all his life to running the church, and the preacher too, to suit himself, and who had no thought of surrendering his prerogative. He is a man of quick perception, strong convictions and splendid executive ability, and is always on the lookout for bills which provide for unnecessary appropriations. He gives the president just time enough to state that it is "moved and seconded that the reading just had be considered the first reading of the bill" etc, and then he jumps upon it and dances on it until it leaves the senate. Senator Long is quite prominently mentioned as the republican candidate for governor in 1892.

A Desperate Suicide.

CORRY, PA., March 2.—Sam Mason, one of the nerviest of Pittsburg's old-time gambling proprietors, attempted to commit suicide on the night express to this place. He cut himself horribly in the throat, both wrists, under the armpits and stabbed himself in the abdomen. Mason is reputed quite wealthy but his brother says he has not been himself for some time, owing to several heavy business reverses. The man's condition is dangerous, and he is dying.

California Horses for the East.

CHICAGO, March 2.—Mike Kelley, the ex-jockey, who is now head trainer of the Maltese Villa stable, belonging to Porter Ashe, passed through here yesterday en route East with three 2-year-olds belonging to the stable. "We will probably race in the East almost entirely this season," said Kelley, "as the distances there suit us. In Geraldine we have a great sprinter, and with her we can get money in the East."

Death of Ex-Governor English.

NEW HAVEN, Conn., March 2.—Ex-Governor James Edward English died to-day. He contracted a severe cold early this week, which developed rapidly into pneumonia. He was 78 years of age, and leaves a widow and one son. Governor English had an enviable national reputation in political and financial circles.

INSULT TO CATHOLICS.

Indignant Denunciation of the Clan-na-Gael by a Priest.

THEY USED THE CHURCH AS A CLOAK

The Organization Had Brought Disgrace on the Irish People and Done Great Harm to the Irish Cause.

PHILADELPHIA, March 2.—The distribution of a four page paper entitled "Clan-Na-Gael" in front of the Roman Catholic churches of this city to-day aroused the indignation of some of the Catholic clergy. Rev. Fitzmaurice, of St. Michaels church drove the disturbers away from in front of his church. At mass he made a speech in which he denounced the Clan-na-Gael in strong language. He said the organization had brought more disgrace on the Irish people and done more harm to the Irish cause than this or the next generation will be able to repair. "Every man in the congregation," he said, "should consider it an insult as an Irish Catholic to have such trash circulated in front of the church. The Clan-na-Gael has used the Catholic church as a cloak to hide their doings. I ask you to throw those papers in the gutter and not let one of them enter your home."

A PRIEST'S MYSTERIOUS DEATH.

Found in the Streets—He Dies When Taken to the Hospital.

PHILADELPHIA, PA., March 2.—A man supposed to be the Rev. Father Peter H. Farron of Baltimore, died in a hospital here this afternoon under circumstances which make his physicians believe he had been severely beaten by unknown parties. He registered at the St. Charles hotel February 29 as P. Herbert. He went away yesterday and was not seen again until this morning, when he was brought back in what the hotel people thought was a patrol wagon. He was found very ill and taken to the hospital, where he soon died. Before his death one of the doctors asked if he had any relations to communicate with, and he replied: "I have no one; if I must die, I cannot help it." His body was badly bruised. Papers found show him to have been connected with the Jesuit institute at Frederick, Md., and also a Catholic church at Baltimore. He evidently had been a wanderer for some time past. The Catholic authorities in Baltimore have been communicated with.

RIVAL CLERGYMEN.

The Interesting War in the Greek Church at Shenandoah.

SHENANDOAH, PA., March 2.—No services were held at the Greek church to-day. Rev. Andru Showicz remained in the parsonage gazing upon the locked doors of the edifice. A party of his friends, all armed, were in and about the parsonage all day, determined not to allow friends of Rev. Wolanski to take possession. Chief Burgess and forty policemen were also on guard to prevent a riot. Rev. Wolanski and a large number of his followers attempted to enter the church, but desisted upon the advice of the police.

BEN BUTLER'S EYE.

The Lid Hangs Down No More, and Caricaturists Are in Despair.

BOSTON, March 2.—The operation on General Ben Butler's famous eyelid, mentioned in these dispatches a couple of weeks ago, has proved entirely successful, and the sight of his left eye has been completely restored. The general's right eye, too, has been developing of late years a drooping lid on a miniature scale. It is now veiled more than the left eye, and will probably be made the object of another operation in the near future.

IMPROVED PASSENGER SERVICE.

Eighty-Five Hours From Chicago to Portland.

CHICAGO, March 2.—The Northwestern and Union Pacific lines to-day inaugurated an improved passenger service. A solid vestibule train will hereafter leave Chicago daily at 11 P. M., and run through to the Pacific coast, delivering passengers without change at Denver in thirty-three and a half hours, Portland in eighty-two hours and San Francisco in eighty-five hours.

POTATOES IN SAN FRANCISCO.

A Great Scarcity in the Market and High Prices Stiffly Held.

SAN FRANCISCO, March 2.—[Special Telegram.]—If Oregon merchants could get a large consignment of potatoes on the market here within the next few days they could realize splendid returns on them. California likes the Oregon potatoes and depends largely on the latter state for her supply. Some months half the receipts of potatoes at the port of San Francisco come from Oregon, but last month's receipts from this source were only one-fourth. The prevailing high prices of potatoes here is becoming a serious matter, in as much as supplies average but little more than one-half the estimated requirements and there is a prospect of the market going somewhat higher.

When prices were low, receipts were more than ample and large quantities were put in warehouses by prominent dealers to await a more favorable turn in the market. When receipts began to fall off owing largely to stormy weather and impassable roads prices immediately rose and are in some instances nearly if not quite treble the original prices when certain varieties were placed in store. When this market had advanced to a point which made it profitable to send Eastern potatoes then several carloads were shipped. The first arrivals, however, were of very poor quality and could not be disposed of at paying rates. In turn local dealers, who had become uneasy over the prospect of liberal shipments from the East, recovered from their scare, and prices of the home article were stiffly held. Potatoes continued to arrive from the East, however, and recently there has been an improvement, though as a rule being inferior to the best California and Oregon. The increased arrivals of Eastern potatoes have not as yet had the anticipated effect of lowering prices, though business is now so profitable that heavier shipments are expected both from the north and east.

During the month of February, the receipts of potatoes at San Francisco from the interior of the state were 54,443 sacks; 13,014 were received from Oregon making a total of 67,457 or a daily average of 2409. The estimated daily requirements are 4000 sacks. Stocks in warehouse have been drawn on quite heavily to meet the deficiency and now they are greatly reduced.

There is also quite a demand for seeding purposes and the supplies of California are expected to run low for some time to come. The present season is backward nearly a month and new potatoes will not cut much figure for a considerable time. During the past week twenty car loads of potatoes arrived from the East and a like quantity could be absorbed for several weeks to come without materially affecting local prices. In the coming week increased arrivals are looked for and shipments may possibly become so free as to afford considerable relief to the market.

THE GOLD BRICK SWINDLE.

A Wealthy Farmer of Bloomfield 70 Years Old the Latest Victim.

PETALUMA, March 2.—Thursday a man giving the name of A. Erwin called upon David Parks, one of the oldest and wealthiest citizens of Bloomfield, and presented a letter of introduction from one of Park's sons who keeps a furniture store in Tulare county—Erwin claimed that he had been a chaplain at the Arizona penitentiary three years, and had been called to the bedside of a dying convict named Eastman. Eastman told him he had robbed a stage in Nevada years before and buried a gold bar which was part of the booty near Bloomfield. A brother of Eastman wanted $1500 on short notice and offered to pay Parks $500 for the use of it for a few days, offering this gold bar, if it could be found, as security. Search must be carefully conducted or the owner might put in a claim. Parks accepted the proposition, and after some trouble the spot was found, having no appearance of having been recently disturbed. By digging a few feet, a lump of apparent gold was unearthed. Erwin chopped off a corner and gave it to Parks to be tested. Parks took it to a jeweler, who pronounced it gold, and the next day Parks gave Eastman $1500 and took the brick. It was agreed Erwin should take Eastman to the train at Petaluma and then return to Parks's for the night. The next day they would go to San Francisco, sell the bar at the mint, Parks would retain his money and interest and pay Erwin the balance. But Erwin did not return from Petaluma, and Parks, becoming suspicious, had the bar examined by the jeweler and found it was brass. Parks complained to the officers, but no trace of the men could be found. Parks is 70 years old and a member of the church.

CALIFORNIA NEWS ITEMS.

A Young Girl Thief.

SAN FRANCISCO, March 2.—[Special Telegram.]—Maria Knudsen, 16 years old, is again lodged in the city prison, booked for the industrial school. About three months ago she stole $300 from her mother here and went to Portland. Her brother followed her, and found the girl in the ranks of the Salvation Army. He brought her back, and a few days ago she cut open the back of her mother's trunk and stole $40, and was about starting north again when arrested.

Sailor Unions in Dispute.

SAN FRANCISCO, March 2.—A peculiar controversy which is at present being made on the water front is that between the Seaman's & Sailor's Protective Association and the Coast Seamen's Union. When the steamship sailors left the steamer State of California coast seamen applied for and obtained the places thus made vacant. When Goodall, Perkins & Co. compromised with the steamship sailors it was the understanding that the men who had left would go back to work. The coast seamen on the State of California, however, showed no desire to give up their berths. Captain Ackley had no desire to discharge the men. The secretary of the steamship sailors visited the secretary of the Coast Seamen's Union but got no satisfaction. Delegates of the former then called on the Council of Federated Trades Friday evening and demanded its aid in forcing the coast seamen to recognize the union. This was granted and the coast seamen will have to recede and allow the others to take their places on the steamers.

Mr. Norman Buttery Considered Slippery.

SAN FRANCISCO, March 2.—[Special Telegram.]—Chief of Police Crowley has received a despatch from Victoria, B. C., requesting him to arrest a young man, Norman Buttery, who left that city on the steamer Queen of the Pacific for San Francisco. Buttery was employed as chief clerk in the Canadian Pacific Railway office, and his sudden departure was regarded with suspicion. It is not known whether he embezzled any of the company money or not, as its chief agent was out of the city at the time the despatch was sent. Crowley will have an officer intercept Buttery as soon as he arrives. The steamer is expected to-morrow.

Opium Valued at $400 Seized.

SAN FRANCISCO, March 2.—Custom house searchers yesterday found sixty-five five-tael boxes of prepared opium in the engine of the steamer Wellington, lying at the wharf. The packages bore evidence of having been hidden in the water tanks, and had been removed to the engine room to be dried.

The Deputy Surveyor and a force of searchers are making great efforts to find more. The Wellington recently arrived from Departure Bay, B. C., laden with coal. The seized opium is worth about $400.

ANACORTES.

Items of Interest From This Pushing Town.

ANACORTES, Feb. 28.—The Canadian Pacific Company's magnificent steamer Premier now calls here en route to and from Tacoma which is another great boon duly appreciated by the traveling public.

A small fire occurred in Currier and Shafer's butcher shop this morning, originating as usual, at the stovepipe in the roof. Owing to the energy of the "Volunteer Fire Brigade" it was extinguished before much damage was done.

The contract for building the new water works system in Anacortes, for the Improvement Company, was awarded to Theodore Warford, of Seattle.

Among the arrivals to-day were F. Page Tustin, of Tustin & Crews, attorneys-at-law, Pendleton, Oregon; J. Cochran, representing the wholesale liquor house of Straufe & McCrum, of San Francisco, and J. C. Ogden, of Virginia City.

The office of justice of the peace for Anacortes precinct has been assumed by Mr. Justice C. W. Beale, who will no doubt administer the law with justice.

Boiler Explosion at Seattle.

SEATTLE, March 1.—[Special Telegram.]—The boiler of a pile-driver engine, belonging to T. A. Jones & Son, exploded this afternoon, severely scalding James Owen, Joseph Ryan and James Brennan, employes of the firm, and Alexander Conley, a friend of Brennan. Conley received a fracture of a leg, and was badly scalded about the face and body. The others were severely scalded but will be around again in a few weeks. The engine was situated in a small cabin on a scow and when the explosion occurred the men were not over ten feet distant eating lunch. The men were knocked down and the roof of the cabin blown completely off. The escaping steam filled the room and scalded the men. It is not known how the explosion occurred as there was plenty of water in the boiler and only sixty pounds of steam.

A SMELTER COMBINE

To Control the Refineries of the United States.

IMMENSE PROFITS IN VIEW

A Trust Which Swallows a Majority of the Reduction Works—Not Much Chance for the Little Fishes.

CHICAGO, March 2.—A local paper asserts that the big smelting organizations of the United States have formed a trust with a capital of $25,000,000. It includes all but five large organizations in the country. Among the companies in it are the Omaha and Grant Smelting and Refining Company of Omaha, the Denver and Kansas City Smelting and Refining Company of Kansas City, Pennsylvania Lead Company, Mansfield, Pa.; Chicago Smelting and Refining Company, Aurora Smelting and Refining Company, Aurora, Ill.; Globe Smelting and Refining Company, of Denver; E. Baltack & Co., Newark, N. J.; Pueblo, Colorado, Smelting and Refining Company, Pueblo, Colorado; Philadelphia Smelting and Refining Company, Pueblo, Colo.; Arkansas Valley Smelting Company, Leadville, Colo.; American Smelting and Mining Company, Leadville; San Juan Smelting Company, Durango, Colo.; Denver Smelter, Salt Lake; Mingo Furnace Company, Salt Lake; Germania Company, Salt Lake; Helena & Livingston Smelting and Refining Company, Helena, Mont.; Montana Smelting Company, Great Falls, Mont.; El Paso Smelter, El Paso, Texas. The first conference between the heads of the companies was held at Omaha in November. The object of the meeting was stated to be to devise a way for protecting smelters from the lead trust. Various ways of organization were discussed, but nothing definite was determined on at that meeting. Guy Barton, of Omaha, was elected president, and Mr. Geist, of Pueblo, secretary. It was shown that the trust would make a profit annually of about $4,000,000. As only six companies were represented at this meeting it was determined to confer with the other manufacturers and have another meeting later. This was held in Chicago February 13, and then it was determined to organize a company known as the United States Smelting and Refining Company, with a capital stock of $15,000,000, to be used for the payment of fixed properties that go into the new organization, and $10,000,000 preferred for purchase of ore and such personal property as it may be necessary to have. To form a sinking fund $250,000 of the profits will be laid aside annually for two years, and each year thereafter $500,000 will be added to this fund. It is asserted the necessary stock will be subscribed and final articles of incorporation will soon be filed in the different states and territories. The chief object of the smelters, it is said, is to place their interests beyond the control of the lead trust.

ELECTRIC FORCE.

The Great Fundamental Principle of the Universe and Its Power to Restore Health to Humanity.

Experiments by scientists are constantly and surely proving electricity to be the great motor power of creation. Electricity is the most powerful chemical agent, as well as the basis of chemical action. It is the primal element of light and heat; the promoter of life and the sustainer of health. Disease yields readily to its magnetic touch, and even unrelenting death is averted by its presence. Thousands of afflicted and suffering bear witness to its healing power. The electro-magnetic, as practiced by Drs. Darrin, has revolutionized the practice of medicine, as is shown by the following

JUSTICE TO MR. STRUVE.

Statement Vindicating Him From Publications Recently Made.

The Erasure and Alteration in the Act of 1873, Granting Tide Lands in Elliott Bay to the Seattle & Walla Walla Railroad.

OLYMPIA, Wash., Feb. 28.—[To the Editor.]—I appeal to you to afford me redress against a great wrong and injury inflicted upon me and my good name by the Olympia correspondent of THE OREGONIAN, by the publication of grossly libelous matter in several of the issues of your paper during the ten days last past.

In THE OREGONIAN of the 20th inst. a lengthy sensational account under a glaring black letter headline, of "A burglar's bungling amendment of an old bill," is published, which by base innuendo and poorly concealed insinuations, connects my name with the alleged alteration in the enrolled copy of the legislative act granting certain tide lands in Elliott bay to the Seattle & Walla Walla Railroad and Transportation Company, which act was approved November 8, 1873, while I was secretary of Washington territory.

No mention or suggestion of any other name than mine was made, and all the various publications in your paper relating to the subject negatively state and charge positively that the erasure and change was made after the governor had signed the bill, and while I was the lawful custodian of the laws. Whether the alteration was properly made in the process of enrollment, or made fraudulently after the bill became a law is a question which I cannot answer from personal knowledge. But whether made innocently or unlawfully, I repel with scorn the covert insinuations made by your correspondent, and assert emphatically that I had no knowledge whatever of the condition of the bill or any of the details of its history or of any alleged alteration therein until I read the correspondence in your paper.

Your correspondent charges positively that a "glaring erasure" had been committed and that the word "completed" was in the bill when it passed the legislature, instead of "commenced" as printed in the session laws. There is no doubt that the lower house, in which the bill originated, adopted an amendment, as stated by your correspondent, but the undisputed record of the council also discloses that amendments to the bill were adopted by that body, which were afterwards concurred in by the house, as appears by a complete copy of the legislative proceedings relating to said bill, certified to by the secretary of state, and which is hereby submitted to you. Unfortunately the record of the council is silent as to the character of these amendments, but Hon. Joseph Foster, a member of the council and the only surviving member of the King county delegation, who were the active promoters of the bill, states positively in his letter of February 25, 1890, herewith submitted, that to the best of his recollection, the council amendment was made in accordance with the law as now printed, by striking out the word "completed" and putting in "commenced," and also the proviso relating to lots embraced in the Maynard plat. Mr. Foster further says in his letter as follows: "I feel very certain that the only restriction in the act was, as it passed the council, that fifteen miles had to be completed within three years to make the grant valid." This statement of Mr. Foster is certainly entitled to be considered prima facie or sufficient evidence of the innocent character of the erasure and alteration in the enrolled bill.

Your correspondent, for the purpose of assigning a motive for the commission of the alleged forgery, stated that according to the statement of "old time lawyers" I was "at that time the attorney of the Seattle & Walla Walla Railroad & Transportation Company." The statement of your correspondent is maliciously false. I challenge the production of any "old time lawyer," or any other person, who has asserted to him that I was at that time, or at any other time, the attorney of the Seattle & Walla Walla Railroad & Transportation Company, or that I was interested in or connected with said company directly or indirectly either as an officer, stockholder, or otherwise. Mr. A. A. Denny, then president of said company, and Mr. J. J. McGilvra, its attorney at that time, are absent from the state, but I submit herewith the affidavit of Mr. Roswell Scott, secretary of the company from the time of its organization to its dissolution, which effectually disposes of that charge, and brands the insinuation of your correspondent as false and unwarranted.

By means of the above statement of your correspondent, he has asserted as certain facts the existence of the corpus delicti, my exclusive opportunity to commit the crime charged and a strong motive for its commission, all of which constitute, as every lawyer knows, very important and indispensable links in the chain of circumstantial proof, and often sufficient to warrant a conviction. To say that I feel unspeakably outraged by the publication of these libelous statements and by this base prostitution of the duties of honest journalism by your correspondent, expresses but feebly my sense of the great injustice done me.

Nor is this all. Your correspondent has deliberately falsified statements of others made to him in relation to this affair. He has published a statement alleged by him to have been made to him by Governor Ferry, who was the governor of the territory in 1873, to the effect that at the time he signed the bill in question, the same was in good shape. Governor Ferry, in a letter to me, dated February 27, 1890, which is herewith submitted, states positively that he "never made that statement, and never used any words that could be so construed, and that he had no reason to believe, nor did he believe, that any portion of the bill referred to was changed after it reached the office of the secretary of the territory."

After my emphatic denial in the Seattle Post-Intelligencer, on February 24, and in reply to the same, your correspondent further made it appear in your issue of February 25 that Miss Mary O'Neil, the enrolling clerk in the legislature of 1873, stated to him that she "was positive that she did not make the alteration, and that the handwriting of the added letters 'nced' was not her handwriting" and that she had with the aid of a glass detected the long stroke of the letter "p," which evidently belonged to the word "completed." Miss O'Neil, in her letter to me of February 27, 1890, indignantly denounces each and every part of the statement of your correspondent as an untruth, and that she never made any statement that would bear such a construction. And she further states that she informed your correspondent that she had examined the bill, and that she believed all of it, excepting the signatures, was in her handwriting. Her letter is submitted to you herewith.

In the same issue of your paper he made it appear that Hon. Frank Henry, a member of the legislature of 1873, said to him that "the enrolled bill had been undoubtedly altered by changing the word completed to commenced." Mr. Henry, in a letter of February 27, handed to you herewith, writes to me "that your correspondent misrepresented what he did say to him in some important particulars, and that he had written to you correcting said misrepresentations," to which letter he referred me for further particulars.

Your correspondent further insinuates, "to show how well the matter was covered up," that the index to the laws had been doctored to conceal the number of the page where the law was printed. The slightest effort to ascertain the truth would have elicited the fullest explanations and all facts relevant to the inquiry. I have been at Olympia very frequently while the legislature has been in session, and have been readily and easily accessible at all times, by mail and telegraph, and I would have gladly aided in the discovery of any facts establishing the truth. The merest inquiry would have informed him that Mr. Henry alone prepared the index to the laws for a compensation paid by me, while I was prostrated in bed by sickness, and that the preparation of all the laws for that session for printing, the printing of the laws and the reading and correction of proof, had been delegated by me to Mr. C. B. Bagley, public printer, and a sworn officer, and to N. S. Porter, esq., an assistant in my office, who, as I believe, and as facts show, performed their duties faithfully and scrupulously and according to my instructions. The letters of these gentlemen showing their connection with that work are herewith submitted to you.

Your correspondent charges that the word "conmeced" has been printed in the laws as "commenced" in the laws of 1873, which is answered by the fact that I caused the usual explanatory note to be prominently published on the title page of the laws containing my official certificate that "obvious errors in orthography and punctuation had been corrected in my office whenever discovered."

Your correspondent in your issue of Feb. 22d, noticing my arrival in Olympia, for the purpose of investigating the alteration of the Seattle and Walla Walla railroad bill while I was secretary, further adds that "he refuses to talk to-night;" when the fact is known to him that from the very first, after I read the charges in your paper, I have denounced the publication on every suitable occasion as a malicious libel, and that to the present time he has never approached me, but has skulked a meeting on every occasion.

I have as briefly as possible stated the facts connected with this alleged alteration of the law, supported by competent evidence and the best evidence which the nature of the case admits of after this long lapse of years. My business with clients, who have intrusted very important interests to my keeping, requires absolute integrity and perfect uprightness in all the professional duties devolving upon me, therefore I cannot permit such grave charges against me, involving the grossest moral turpitude, to pass unnoticed and uncontradicted. While I have no reason to charge the management of THE OREGONIAN with any intention to reflect upon me unjustly, I must nevertheless insist with firmness that your paper shall repair the injury inflicted upon me as far as now possible, by publishing these facts, with a suitable retraction.

LETTER FROM HON. JOSEPH FOSTER TO H. G. STRUVE.

SEATTLE, Wash., Feb. 25, 1890.

H. G. Struve, Esq.—Dear Sir: Answering your inquiries of this date, I write to say that I well remember the bill to confirm the title of the tide lands to the Seattle & Walla Walla Railroad Company. I was a member of the council the year the bill was passed. In the house Frank Clark tried to smother it in the judiciary committee, but I got my friends to raise it and it came up to the council with an amendment to the effect that the grant should not take effect until the road was completed. We amended the bill in the council, and according to the best of my recollection I will state that the amendment was made in accordance with the laws as now printed by striking out the word "completed" and putting in "commenced," and also the proviso relating to lots embraced in the Maynard plat. I feel very certain that the only restriction in the act was as it passed the council that fifteen miles had to be completed within three years to make the grant valid. I know nothing about the way the bill was enrolled or any other of the matters concerning which you have inquired. If you will refer to Mr. McGilvra, who was the attorney of the railroad company, you can probably get all the information about it that you need.

Very truly yours,
JOSEPH FOSTER.

AFFIDAVIT BY ROSWELL SCOTT.

STATE OF WASHINGTON, } ss.
County of King. }

Roswell Scott, being first duly sworn, on oath deposes and says, that he is of the age of 58 years, and is and has been for nineteen years last past a resident of the city of Seattle in said King county; that from the time of the organization of the Seattle and Walla Walla Railroad and Transportation Company, until the sale of the the same to the Columbia and Puget Sound Railroad Company in the year 1880, or prior thereto, he was continuously the duly elected and acting secretary of said Seattle and Walla Walla Railroad and Transportation Company, and as such secretary had charge of and had in his custody the records of said company. That for 15 years last past he has been acquainted with H. G. Struve, Esq., an attorney-at-law, now residing in the said city of Seattle.

That prior to the sale of said Seattle and Walla Walla Railroad and Transportation Company to the said Columbia and Puget Sound Railroad Company in the year 1880, or prior thereto, the said H. G. Struve never was directly or indirectly, connected with the said Seattle and Walla Walla Railroad and Transportation Company, either as an attorney for said company, stockholder, or in any other capacity, nor was he in any way interested therein.

A LETTER FROM GOVERNOR FERRY.

OLYMPIA, Feb. 27.

Hon. H. G. Struve, Seattle, Washington—My Dear Sir: My attention has been called to articles in several newspapers concerning an alteration made in a bill of the legislature of 1873, granting certain tide lands to the Seattle & Walla Walla Railroad & Transportation Company. One of these articles, published in the Portland OREGONIAN of February 20, 1890, alleges that I stated that "my recollection was that the bill was in good shape when I signed it, and filed it in the secretary of state's office." I never made that statement and never used any words that could be so construed. During the session of 1873 many bills were presented to me as enrolled bills that had interlineations and corrections, and in some instances even the original bills were presented duly signed by the president of the council and the speaker of the house as enrolled bills, without having been actually enrolled. I have no reason to believe, nor do I believe, that any portion of the bill referred to was changed after it reached the office of the secretary of the territory. You at that time had no motive that I can imagine for making any alteration. You were not then, so far as I have any knowledge, connected with the Seattle & Walla Walla Railroad & Transportation Company as an attorney, stockholder, or otherwise. Very truly yours,

ELISHA P. FERRY.

LETTER FROM MISS MARY O'NEIL, ENROLLING CLERK.

OLYMPIA, Wash., Feb. 27.

Mr. H. G. Struve—Dear Sir: I have read in THE OREGONIAN of February 25 a statement of their Olympia correspondent relating to an alteration in the act of the legislature granting tide lands in Elliot bay to the Seattle and Walla Walla Railroad and Transportation Company, which was passed in 1873, while I was enrolling clerk in the legislature. Mr. Reed, the correspondent, reports me as having said in an interview with him, that I had examined the bill at the secretary's office and that I was positive I did not make alteration; that the handwriting of the letters "nced" were not my handwriting. He also reports me as having stated to him that with the aid of a glass I detected the long stroke of the letter "p" which evidently belonged to the word "completed." I want to state to you that each and every part of the foregoing report is untrue. I never made any statement that would bear any such construction. All that I said to Mr. Reed was that the "m," "e" and the "ed" in "conmeced" looked nicer than my writing, but that I thought it was my handwriting. I also stated that I might have made a mistake in spelling the word "conmeced," as I was very much rushed with work, and so many bills passed that could not be enrolled at all. I never said anything about the word "completed" or that with the aid of the glass I detected the long stroke of the letter "p." I also stated to him that I did not believe Mr. Struve changed the bill. I have examined the enrolled bill and I believe that all of it, excepting the signature, is in my handwriting. Whenever I enrolled a bill I usually read and compared it and then gave it to Mr. Henry, who I suppose took it back to the house. Very respectfully,

M. A. O'NEIL.

LETTER FROM FRANCIS HENRY, ESQ.

OLYMPIA, Wash., Feb. 27.

Hon. H. G. Struve—Dear Sir: In reply to your inquiry I will say, that what purports to have been my statements in regard to the act of the Washington territorial legislature of 1873, giving certain tide lands in front of Seattle to the Seattle & Walla Walla Rail & Transportation Company, published in THE OREGONIAN of the 25th instant, misrepresents what I did say in some important particulars. I wrote to said paper yesterday over my own signature correcting said misrepresentations, to which you are respectfully referred for my views in regard to said bill as it appears on file in the secretary's office.

As to the index to the laws of the session of 1873 referred to, it was prepared for the printer from sheets of said laws furnished to me by him by myself, I having been employed and paid by you for that service, you being sick at the time. When my work was done I handed it to the printer, and did not see it or think of it again. As for the particular act above referred to, I have no recollection of it whatever, in connection with the index or otherwise. Yours truly,

FRANCIS HENRY.

LETTER FROM N. S. PORTER, ESQ.

OLYMPIA, Wash., Feb. 27, 1890.

Hon. H. G. Struve—Dear Sir: Yours of this date, relative to the Session Laws of Washington territory for the year 1873, is received. In reply thereto, I will say: I assisted you in the duties of your office as secretary that year, and among other duties I read proof with Mr. C. B. Bagley, who was public printer, when he was printing the said laws. We at all times had free access to the enrolled copies of the laws for the purpose of comparison, but I do not now remember anything about the erasure or alteration in the act granting tide lands to the Seattle & Walla Walla Railroad Company. You took no part, to my knowledge, in preparing the copies of the laws for publication nor in reading proof after the same were in type. You instructed us, in all cases, where a euphonious word was found in the enrolled bill, to print the same in the text, but in italics, and inclose it in parentheses, and that in all cases where a word was necessary to retain the sense of the context, or where one word had obviously been mistaken for another, to supply the word supposed to be proper, but in brackets. You also instructed us to correct any obvious errors in orthography and punctuation whenever discovered. These instructions appear printed on the second page of the volume of the Session Laws for 1873, and were carefully and scrupulously observed by Mr. Bagley and myself in reading proof. While I have no particular recollection of this instance, I should certainly regard a word spelled "conmeced" as an obvious orthographical error, and to mean "commenced" when used as it was in connection with the other words in the law in question. Very respectfully yours, N. S. PORTER.

LETTER FROM C. B. BAGLEY, LATE PUBLIC PRINTER.

SEATTLE, Wash., Feb. 25, 1890.

Hon. H. G. Struve, Seattle, Wash. Dear Sir: In reply to your note of inquiry in regard to the act passed by the legislature of this territory in 1873 in regard to the tide lands of Elliot bay and the Seattle and Walla Walla Railroad Company, I have this to say:

First—I have no personal recollection of the bill or law, nor of any alteration thereto.

Second—I printed the laws of the session of 1873, as well as those of five subsequent sessions. After taking the oath as printer I had free access to the manuscript copies of the laws and used them as "printer's copy" and compared the same "by copy" with Mr. N. S. Porter, who then acted as secretary for you.

Third.—The manuscript laws of that session, as well as of all other sessions of the territorial legislature contained many clerical errors, and your instructions were to correct obvious ones of all sorts, particularly of spelling and punctuation. Such being the case, if it be true, that the letters "conmeced" appeared in such connection that they must mean "commenced" or "completed" I should certainly put it into type as "commenced" rather than "completed," and I may add that I think any other printer would do the same.

Lastly.—I may add that I think if either you or I should have altered a word in a manuscript, for an improper purpose, the substituted word would have been spelled correctly and there would have been no need of a legislative inquiry to decide what word was intended to be used.

I am very respectfully,
Your Obedient Servant,
C. B. BAGLEY.

March, April, May

Are the best months in which to purify your blood, for at no other season does the system so much need the aid of a reliable medicine like Hood's Sarsaparilla as now. During the long, cold winter, the blood becomes thin and impure, the body becomes weak and tired, the appetite may be lost. Hood's Sarsaparilla is peculiarly adapted to purify and enrich the blood, to create a good appetite and to overcome that tired feeling. It increases in popularity every year, for it is the ideal spring medicine.

"I have suffered for some years with eruptions on my face and neck. After using five bottles of Hood's Sarsaparilla, every blemish disappeared, and now my general health is excellent. I believe it to be best medicine in the world." E. E. WALSH, Olalla, Oregon.

Hood's Sarsaparilla is prepared from Sarsaparilla, Dandelion, Mandrake, Dock, Juniper Berries, and other well known vegetable remedies, in such a peculiar manner as to derive the full medicinal value of each. It will cure, when in the power of medicine, scrofula, salt rheum, sores, boils, pimples, all humors, dyspepsia, biliousness, sick headache, indigestion, general debility, catarrh, rheumatism, kidney and liver complaints. It overcomes that extreme tired feeling caused by change of climate, season, or life, and imparts life and strength to the whole system.

"I have used six bottles of Hood's Sarsaparilla for indigestion. It has helped me a great deal. I think it the best medicine for indigestion and dyspepsia." MRS. N. A. LAUDERDALE, 197 N. Fifth street, San Jose, Cal.

Scene—First Dinner to the Family Physician by Young Married Couple.

FAMILY PHYSICIAN—Do you know, there seems to be a natural flavor about this food that is most appetizing? What method do you use in cooking it?

LADY OF THE HOUSE—Well, Doctor, when I was at home, my mother would have no other than a Charter Oak Stove. From my earliest recollection I remembered how she would praise it, and her cooking was superb. So when we were married I insisted on having the same kind of stove. Of course the improvements made on them since mother bought hers, are most wonderful. Ours has all the latest, including the Wire Gauze Oven Doors. I don't understand the process exactly, but they tell me that all meats cooked in ovens with these doors, retain their juices and flavors to a much greater degree than by any other means. Can you explain the theory, Charles?

CHARLES (the Husband)—I can't remember all that was told me, but I know the Doctor can give a clear and scientific statement of the reasons, can you not Doctor?

DOCTOR—Well, it is hardly professional to ask such information from a doctor; in fact, I am inclined to think he would not be helping his practice much by saying anything in favor of the Charter Oak stoves. But as I have one in my kitchen, and know something about it, I think I can enlighten you. Of course it would take quite a long lecture to explain everything to you scientifically, and we have not time for that. Count Rumford, an American, who was knighted in Europe for his scientific attainments, pointed out, nearly a hundred years ago, that baking and roasting meats in air-tight ovens is wrong, and he proved it by actual experiments. He asserted that it was as essential to health that our food should be cooked in pure, fresh air as that we should breathe pure, fresh air, and that air-tight ovens render the air impure, and the food cooked therein becomes tainted and unhealthy. But how to properly ventilate the oven was not discovered for many years after Count Rumford's time. The difficulty was to allow fresh air to enter the oven uniformly without cooling it perceptibly, and this has been accomplished by Mr. Filley's invention of the Wire Gauze Oven Door. The air enters the oven through the wire gauze in the form of very fine jets, and as there is a large surface of gauze the air is diffused and heated without forming air currents to cool the oven. Cooking might be called a chemical decomposition with the aid of heat, but oxygen is as necessary as the heat, and this is furnished by the air. Again, the meat roasted in air-tight oven loses a large part of its most nutritious juices, which become dried out. Ventilating the oven prevents this waste, and the meats cooked perfectly in the same way as broiling over a charcoal fire or roasting in the old fashioned spit of our grandfather's time. Fresh air, or the oxygen furnished by the air, also improves the baking of bread, making it much lighter and more easily digested. Bread baked in a Charter Oak Stove with Wire Gauze Oven Doors will never mould, and that is very strong proof that the bread is pure and healthy.

CHARLES—Thank you, doctor. I think we understand the reason much better now.

MARKETS BY TELEGRAPH.

NEW YORK STOCK MARKET.

NEW YORK, March 1.—The stock market to-day was dull. As during the week persistent pressure of the bears to force down prices met with but partial success, an attack this morning was made upon the expectation that the bank reserve would show a falling off of about two and a half millions, but the statement fell a million short of that amount, and the rush to cover after the result was known made a sharp and material rally. The market finally closed dull but strong, generally at a shade better than opening prices.

The first issue of the Monmouth Democrat, A. R. McMillen, editor, has made its appearance. From its columns it is noted that Monmouth needs a hotel; that the city council has ordered a number of street lamps to throw light on the thriving little city; that a gentleman from Michigan is corresponding with parties with a view to putting up a flouring mill there; that the net assessment of the town is $105,230.

Private letters from Prineville confirm the reports of newspapers that the loss experienced by stockmen is very heavy, and indeed almost disheartening. There were enough prudent farmers, however, who provided feed for their flocks and herds to prove that even a heavy winter is not a bar to successful stock-raising, and that only those who expected stock to "rustle" for themselves during the worst season of the year are losers.

The Albany Democrat sums up a number of interviews with farmers as follows: "The present cold snap has not affected the fall wheat, which looks well and promises a fine crop, except, perhaps, in very low places. The ground is too dry and the freeze has not been deep enough, as a rule. In order to raise wheat from the ground by freezing, the ground needs to be very wet, and the freeze needs to be alternated by daily thaws, or the joints need to be developed some.

ALL-ROUND ARGUMENTS.

High Prices for Wool to the Grower, and Low Prices to the Manufacturer.

The Wealth of the Country in the Hands of the Rich, While Our Poor People are Short of Funds.

MACLEAY, March 1.—[To THE EDITOR.]—Our esteemed friends, the democrats, do make the greatest mess of their frantic effort to convince somebody that their party should be supported by the farmers and laboring men generally.

In 1886 they demanded that the duty on wool, especially, should be increased; in 1888 they insisted that it be taken off altogether. Since democracy is an "eternal principle" that never changes, it becomes a subject for specially interesting conjecture just where their platform of 1890 will hit the wool question. It would be useless to speculate on such uncertainties until the committee on platform actually reports.

It was a favorite argument of democratic orators in 1888 that wool, under a low tariff, had borne the highest prices; hence farmers should favor a low duty on wool; but another argument for a low duty was that we must have cheaper woolen cloth; hence cheap raw material for the manufacturer. This means cheap wool, of course.

Just how the same fleece of wool is going to bring a high price to the farmer and at the same furnish cheap raw material to the manufacturer, can probably be explained by the governor's organ in Salem, which has recently discovered that Thomas Jefferson "sired and penned" the federal constitution.

Our friends, the democrats, are constantly reminding us that, through the iniquities of a protective tariff and the operation of trusts and "giant railroad corporations," the farmers are being reduced to "pauperization and degradation."

But farmers can point to the fact that the prices of all manufactured articles have been reduced within the last twenty years fully 20 per cent, and many of them 50 per cent. In fifteen years plows have been reduced from $22 to $15, wagons from $150 to $80, binders from $300 to $160, mowers from $100 to $50, and everything else in proportion.

Our friends, the democrats, are forced to admit these facts, but always attempt a reply by saying that railway connection with the East and competition among railroad companies has caused the reduction.

Granted; but what becomes of your howl against giant railroad corporations pauperizing the farmers if they are the means of cheapening these necessary adjuncts of every farm?

According to democratic logic the necessaries of life are high, on account of the "iniquitous forty-seven per cent. tariff," and they are low on account of the "giant railroad corporations."

A woman once borrowed her neighbor's kettle, and after breaking it took it home. Her defense, when refusing to pay for it, consisted of three points: First, it was sound when she took it home; secondly, it was broken when she got it, and lastly, she had never had it! Ten to one she had been reading a democratic article on the tariff.

Our friends, the democrats, lament with a grief that refuses to be comforted with the farmer who sells his wheat for a low price, and at the same time they dissolve in undying pity for the workingmen who cries for bread.

With one eye the average democratic editor weeps copious floods of sympathy for the farmer over the low price of wheat while with the other he sheds bathfuls of tears over the workingman because of high priced bread.

Just how you are going to secure a high price to the farmer for his bushel of wheat and then make it into cheap loaves for working people is fully equal to that other democratic proposition to guarantee high priced wool to the farmer and low priced wool to the manufacturer at the same rate of duty.

When Thomas Jefferson wrote the constitution of the United States with his "immortal hand" (see the noble governor's organ at Salem of February 8,) he ought to have more explicitly provided for these happy democratic combinations.

And our friends, the democrats, go through great gulfs of tribulation every day because foreign vessels come to our ports for wheat laden with rock for ballast, instead of foreign goods for our people. One democratic writer in this county, near Sublimity, has the stomach ache real bad because a republican neighbor has been to Portland and actually saw the identical rocks.

In fact this ballast business has been a prolific source of democratic abdominal irritation for several years.

If a man comes to my granary to buy a load of wheat, it is much better for me in the transaction if he comes with his wagon empty, than to bring it loaded with potatoes, provided I must buy his potatoes, when I already have all I can possibly use. For a farmer to buy a load of potatoes every time he sells a load of wheat, when he already had as many potatoes of his own raising as he could use, would be considered to be the full measure of industrial stupidity; but it would be just as stupid for the United States to buy a shipload of foreign goods every time it sells a cargo of wheat, when it makes all the goods at home that its people can use.

Every shipload of foreign goods brought to this country means hundreds of thousands of dollars sent away not to return, for our democratic friends never tire of telling us that England, angry at our protective system, has developed unlimited wheat fields in India, and no longer looks to us for her wheat supply. Hence it follows that whether we buy English goods or not, that country will continue to subsist on Indian wheat, for our friends, the democrats, are authority for the assurance that American farmers never compete with the laborers of India, and England always buys where she can buy the cheapest.

Therefore, it follows that when the democratic objection to ships coming in ballast shall be overcome, American manufacturers may as well shut up shop, for England could as easily supply all our goods as a part, and since the object in buying them at all would be to load all incoming vessels, there would be literally nothing for American manufacturers to do.

It cannot be argued that American manufacturers could, as well as not, sell their goods as cheaply as those of England, because if they did we would still be under the same obligation to buy foreign goods in order to prevent foreign vessels coming in ballast. Those everlasting rocks are what worry the democrats.

The day dream and song of the average democrat lead onward toward that utopian condition where foreign vessels shall come to our shores freighted with English goods, to be paid for with millions of dollars which England will in turn send to India for wheat. We will neither get the money back nor have the privilege of feeding the laborers who make the goods.

Under this benign arrangement our people would have nothing to do but vote the democratic ticket and embrace the civilization of the Ozark mountains.

This is a perfectly fair statement of the difference between the parties, and the more the situation is discussed the more the farmers will reject anything looking towards free trade.

The democrats are always grieving because the "circulating medium" is insufficient to transact the business of the country; yet they advocate a system that would drain the country of millions of dollars every year, with nothing in sight to bring it back.

They feel wofully insulted when called free traders, yet they have a club in this county christened "Free Trade" by its own members, where inconsistency gallantly strives for the scepter against the combined forces of uproarious hilariousness.

When The Daily Astorian pointed out that American iron was selling in the Liverpool market and asked some "free trader" to explain it, nearly every democratic paper in the state made itself ridiculous by accepting the request and endeavoring to show why the protective tariff makes American iron so much "dearer" than that of English manufacture.

When you point out that often since the enactment of our present laws wheat has sold here for one dollar per bushel, and that in 1876 it sold readily for $1.40, the democratic reply is that the natural law of supply and demand regulates such things; but when wheat bears a low price they say the depression is caused by the republican tariff system.

When anything goes wrong the entire democratic party flies into the face of the government and says, "You did it, you mean thing, you." But when things go right the success is ascribed to individual exertion.

One of the most harrowing complaints of the democratic party is that the republicans have so shaped things that the wealth of the country has got into the hands of the rich men and contrary to the experience of other nations our poor people seem to be short of funds. As a remedy they propose to send our money abroad to England and India and destroy our present markets at home.

In fact, they believe the things they ought not to believe and they disbelieve the things they ought to believe, and there is no health in them.

Notwithstanding all these absurdities and inconsistencies and even dangerous theories, their battle-cry is, "We, the people!"

Three tailors doing business on Tooley street, London, once became dissatisfied with the "administration," and addressed a manifesto to the king, which began by saying, "We, the people of England." In its transparent heresies and ridiculous assumptions the democratic party is simply repeating the history of the Tooley street tailors, which is why I remark that our esteemed friends, the democrats, do make the greatest mess of their frantic efforts to convince somebody that they are entitled to the support of the farmers and laboring men generally.

A FINE SPECULATION

In Port Angeles, (near Port Townsend) being 480 acres of nice land near the city. Of course every one knows Port Angeles is a fine place in which to invest just now, as the Union Pacific Railroad Co., will build in there this year and will begin at once, the construction of large wharves and warehouses, and put on extra line of steamers to supply rapidly increasing traffic to this grand port. This land now offered is sure to double in value within this year and large speculators will find a golden opportunity of doubling their money quickly by consulting Long & Elkins at 24 Washington street. We also sell lots in Anacortes. 25ftf*

SHORT ITEMS FOR BUSY MEN

Outlook for To-Night's School Taxpayers' Meeting.

New Church Organization—Pioneer Woman Dead at the City Park—Moran Case—Chinese Murderers—Other Notes.

AT THE PARK.—A large number of persons [illegible] at the city park yesterday although the walks, [illegible] paths and roads there was not very [illegible] as the frost was coming out. The view [illegible] the atmosphere being clear, and [illegible] snow capped and fields of snow [illegible] stood out in bold relief [illegible] the foothills. [illegible] the day seemed more spring like than any [illegible] time, and the birds were calling in the [illegible] and flitting gaily about as if rejoiced [illegible] winter was at an end. The cellar for the [illegible] keeper's cottage is completed and a lot of [illegible] and mortar and lumber are on the grounds. [illegible] zoological department of the park has received [illegible] in the shape of two hawks and an [illegible] presented by Tony McCrew. The animals [illegible] fine condition. The seal tank alone [illegible] and deserted. Park Officer Myers [illegible] wants no more seals until the city [illegible] to supply the park with water. "There [illegible] trying to keep seals without the proper [illegible] and accommodations" said he "and I [illegible] no more requests for such animals [illegible] water."

SECOND STREET BRIDGE.—Work was resumed on [illegible] Second street bridge, across Marquam gulch, [illegible] days since, and the driving of piles for [illegible] to rest on is completed about half way [illegible]. The timbers for the bridge are piled along [illegible] on each side of the gulch and the contractor, Mr. R. A. Webster, says he will have his [illegible] at work soon and will have the [illegible] completed by April 1. The driving of piles [illegible] to rest on will make a much more [illegible] than the style employed on the bridges [illegible] that vicinity heretofore, which have [illegible] the ground, trenches being dug for [illegible] the steep sides of the gulch. In times of [illegible] the sides of the gulch slide down, doing [illegible] damage to the bridges. This was what [illegible] the bridge on Corbett street, which Mr. [illegible] is repairing, and which was left by the [illegible] very precarious condition. Had pilot [illegible] in the sides of this gulch the boats [illegible] flood.

NEW CHURCH ORGANIZATION.—For the past [illegible] the Rev. M. L. Sweizig has been holding [illegible] in the hall of the Swedish Brethren, [illegible] northeast corner of Second and A streets, [illegible] to organizing an English Lutheran [illegible] this city. That denomination is already [illegible] here by five congregations, but they [illegible] of foreign nationality. At the close of the [illegible] service yesterday the first step was taken [illegible] the permanent establishment of what is [illegible] to be known as St. James English Lutheran [illegible]. Articles of agreement were adopted [illegible] by twenty-one members, and Messrs. [illegible], W. S. Cross and H. S. Manning were [illegible] as the first trustees. As there is an [illegible] of Lutheran material here, and more [illegible] every week, the probability is that the [illegible] will soon develop into a strong and [illegible] organization.

AN IMPORTANT MEETING.—The meeting of the [illegible] of the school district to-night at the [illegible] promises to be well attended. The [illegible] of the district's affairs grows in importance with each succeeding year. The district [illegible] with each succeeding year. The district [illegible] with the swift spread of the city, and [illegible] to be taken looking towards provision [illegible] needs. Pressing demands already exist [illegible] North Portland and on Portland Heights for [illegible] accommodations. The board as at [illegible] constituted, is one in every way worthy [illegible] confidence of taxpayers. But the time may [illegible] when their action will need careful [illegible] from voters. The best way is to turn [illegible] vote the best measures for future needs. [illegible] has prepared a comprehensive estimate [illegible] year's needs. Each proposition should be [illegible] weighed and a decisive recommendation [illegible].

DEATH OF AN AGED PIONEER WOMAN.—Mrs. [illegible] Lichtenthaler, one of the pioneer residents [illegible] Oregon, died yesterday at her residence in [illegible] Portland at the advanced age of 84 years. [illegible] Lichtenthaler came to Portland in 1858 with [illegible] husband, Rev. J. B. Lichtenthaler, a clergyman [illegible] the church of the United Brethren, who [illegible] remembered by the earlier residents [illegible] city. Several days ago Mrs. Lichtenthaler [illegible] with an attack of la grippe, and speedily [illegible] until death relieved her from all [illegible] pain. She leaves five sons to mourn her [illegible] two in Illinois and three in Oregon, two of [illegible] F. M. Lichtenthaler, of Portland, and [illegible] W. Lichtenthaler, of Union county, being [illegible] of their dying mother. The funeral [illegible] place on Tuesday at 2 o'clock P. M., [illegible] the residence of deceased in South Portland.

DESTROYED BY FIRE.—An alarm was turned in [illegible] about 7:30 last evening for a fire [illegible] to be on the hillside in the western [illegible] of the city, beyond the reach of the engines. It was the house of S. H. Fairchild, manager of the [illegible] Company, which took [illegible] during the absence of the family and was [illegible] destroyed. A few pieces of furniture were [illegible] by those who were first on the ground, but [illegible] else was destroyed. The house was [illegible] west of the head of J street, on the hill- [illegible] above the Burnside residence. At first [illegible] supposed to be Mr. D. Robertson's new [illegible] on the hill behind the Gambrinus brewery, [illegible] it was ascertained to be in the valley [illegible] of that hill everybody was certain that it [illegible] Mr. Burnside's residence. The building [illegible], and the loss is about $3000.

IMPROVING NORTH FRONT.—The work of improving North Front street has at last been begun [illegible]. The Terminal Company has been at [illegible] hauling gravel and raising their tracks to [illegible]. This elevates the track along by the Al- [illegible] from two to three feet. E. A. Webster [illegible] the contract for grading the street in [illegible], has a large number of men and [illegible] work and the street is already beginning [illegible] something like a street. The railroad [illegible] still rather numerous on the lower part [illegible] the street and there seems but little sign of [illegible] number growing less notwithstanding the [illegible] of the council. The railroad companies [illegible] planning their terminal grounds [illegible] on appropriating North Front [illegible], and they will come very near doing it by [illegible].

THE EAST WATER WORKS.—Albina is to have [illegible] of water works. There appears to be no [illegible] about that, as two parties are striving for [illegible] privilege of supplying them. The East Portland Water Company think they bought the Albina water works from Captain Foster, and they [illegible] so strongly that they are endeavoring, [illegible] suit, to compel them to "deliver the [illegible]." Mr. G. W. Bates has also bought the water [illegible], and evidently thinks he has got them, for [illegible] ordered $10,000 worth of 4 to 8-inch water [illegible] and two pumps of a capacity of 750,000 [illegible] per day, which are all to be shipped from [illegible] at once. By and by the cities will all be [illegible], and Bull Run will be brought in [illegible] the city will own all the water works.

WAS HE POISONED?—George Becker, a young [illegible] aged 18 years, died at his home, No. 145 F [illegible] at 8 o'clock yesterday morning under rather [illegible] circumstances. He had been slightly ill [illegible] the grippe for several days, and on the night [illegible] he died he took a drink of whiskey to cut [illegible] cold. The drink made him very sick and when [illegible] were called shortly before his death, [illegible] all the symptoms of poisoning. He died [illegible], the physicians being unable to render [illegible] any assistance. In view of the suspicious [illegible] came to his death by poisoning, the coroner will hold an inquest at 2 o'clock this afternoon. It will also be necessary to make a post [illegible] examination in order to determine the [illegible] of death.

BUILDING BOOM.—The work of excavating for [illegible] foundation of Hon. H. W. Corbett's brick [illegible] at Oak and Fifth is about completed, and [illegible], lime and cement are on the ground [illegible] for the masons and bricklayers. The excavation for R. Perkins's six-story hotel at Fifth [illegible] and Washington is about completed, and a force [illegible] men and teams were hard at work there yesterday. The timbers for Captain Buchanan's building at Fifth and Alder are on the ground, and the [illegible] has been cleared ready for work to begin. [illegible] were hauling rock for the foundation of [illegible] of these buildings yesterday from the terminal grounds. It was from the Butte quarry on [illegible] East Side.

NEAR THE SHADOWY WORLD.—Rev. Jesse Moreland is very sick and but slight hope is entertained [illegible] of his recovery. He was attacked by the grippe [illegible] five weeks ago, but it soon yielded to treatment and then he had an attack of sciatic rheumatism [illegible] which he has suffered greatly. The [illegible] attacks have about exhausted the old gentleman's stock of vitality, as he is eighty-eight years [illegible] of age, and he has been very close to the verge at [illegible] times within the past few days. Having [illegible] lived since boyhood with a purpose of being [illegible] ready for a change of worlds he is tranquil and [illegible] and ready to meet the Master he has [illegible] so long whenever He wills it.

PREPARING FOR HIGH WATER.—"Soon I will have [illegible] factory up again," said Ira F. Powers, who was one of the heaviest losers by the recent flood. "This time I am building for posterity. I am building so that neither high water nor [illegible] can do me any harm. The foundations [illegible] of my buildings will be so high that the water [illegible] to be six feet deep on First street before [illegible] will be affected by the floods. In fact I will be [illegible] for every emergency, and will fear nothing [illegible] of earthquakes and cyclones. All told [illegible] will amount to about $25,000, and it will [illegible] nearly as much more to start up again."

TWICE IN JEOPARDY.—Judge W. H. Adams [illegible] returned from Walla Walla, where he has [illegible] looking after the famous murder case of the [illegible] Chinamen, So Ho Me and So Ho Ge, in which [illegible] scored a signal victory. The indictment [illegible] charged them with manslaughter, and the [illegible] brought in a compromise verdict of murder [illegible] second degree. The district attorney offers [illegible] a plea of guilty to manslaughter, but [illegible] hopes to have the verdict set aside [illegible] and the prisoners released, on the ground [illegible] they have been once in jeopardy.

PLANS COMPLETED.—The drawings for the Pen- [illegible] savings bank, which are at the office of [illegible] Marshall, are now completed, and show [illegible] handsome structure. The contracts will shortly [illegible] let. Mr. Marshall will soon have ready also [illegible] plans of the three-story brick hotel, to cost [illegible], for Kappyau.

TWENTY-FIRST ANNUAL MEETING.—The twenty-first annual meeting of the Young Men's Christian Association will be held Wednesday evening, at 8 o'clock, March 5th. The active members are requested to attend as important business will be transacted. A musical and literary programme will be furnished by the young people of Calvary Presbyterian church, and a brief address will be given by Rev. Dr. Landon.

MAY MOVE FOR DISMISSAL.—It is stated on reliable authority that the public prosecutor will probably move at an early day for the dismissal of the case against Dr. Morand, charged with manslaughter, effected through malpractice. The witnesses for the prosecution, it seems, cannot be relied on.

DIED NEAR SPRINGVILLE.—Nathan Walker, a young man well known in this city, having been employed as a backdriver for a number of years, died at his home beyond Springville about 8 o'clock Saturday evening. The body was yesterday brought to Portland for burial.

WRITE LEGIBLY.—We have a statement about Methodist church work in East Portland which we promised to print, but on examination find that no one can read it. They who desire matter to appear in THE OREGONIAN should write it legibly.

THE WEATHER is nice and baby ought to be out. See the bargains in carriages offered at Golden Rule Bazaar.

CITY TAXES.—This is the last week in which to pay taxes before they become delinquent. Look after them.

THERE is a good delivery horse for sale cheap at Hollabaugh's grocery, corner Tenth and Washington.

WORTHY OF SPECIAL NOTICE.—Read W. M. Killingsworth plain talk on second page.

THE THEATERS TO-NIGHT.

First Presentation of "The Great Metropolis"—Miss Essie Tittel at Cordray's—Vaudeville at the Standard and Royal.

At the Marquam Grand "The Great Metropolis" will be presented this evening for the first time in Portland. This magnificent play, a melodrama, in five acts is the production of George H. Jessop and Ben Teal. Both gentlemen are well and favorably known. Mr. Teal is particularly well known in Portland, where he spent most of his younger days. His parents and brothers and sisters have resided in Oregon since the early pioneer days, and Ben's early friends will be glad to see his handiwork in "The Great Metropolis." It has been called "the sensation and crowning glory of the century," and will be produced by the Rial & Morris Company from the Grand Opera House, San Francisco, where it had a run of three weeks before packed houses.

While the play teems with wonderfully realistic effects, the chief scenic feature is the representation of an ocean storm off the Jersey coast, showing the wreck of the Flying Fish and the rescue of the passengers by a United States life-saving crew. The individual members of the company are excellent. Harry Bell, well known here, as the real estate broker receives his share of the applause nightly. Wm. Morris and Eleanor Barry are in the cast, and "The Great Metropolis" must be seen to be appreciated.

CORDRAY'S THEATER-MUSEE.

To-night Miss Essie Tittell will appear in the title role in the great play of "Leah, the Forsaken," which made such actresses as Modjeska, Bateman and Cushman famous. This little lady is rapidly advancing as an actress, and bids fair ere many years to be at the top of the ladder of fame in her profession. That she has become a great favorite with the theater-goers of Portland is an established fact, and her many friends will be sorry when her engagement draws to a close. Several new acts and sketches have been added to the musee performance, and the management have fortunately struck the popular cord in the way of amusing the public.

CORT'S STANDARD THEATER.

"The Chicago Comedy Company" make their bow at this theater this evening. They come highly spoken of, and as Manager Letcher has the reputation of securing first-class attractions, they will be up to the mark. Several other new faces will appear, and an original sketch, entitled "The Arrival of McGinty," will be presented.

CLINTON'S THEATER ROYAL.

To-night the "Crescent City Quartette," a combination renowned for sweet singing, will appear at this theater. John Sherman's "Phantasma," which was such a success last week, will be repeated. The bill this week is first-class and will no doubt draw crowded houses.

WALLACE'S YEAR BOOK.

THE OREGONIAN is in receipt of that sterling horseman's manual, Wallace's year book. Whatever opinion one may hold as to the soundness of Mr. Wallace's doctrines as to registration and breeding, there is but one sentiment possible to entertain concerning his indefatigable and generally successful efforts at upbuilding and ennobling the art of horse breeding.

Mr. Wallace's book grows in comprehensiveness and in value with each succeeding year; and its value for Oregon breeders increases with the added scope and extensiveness of the work in Oregon. A careful perusal of the pages of his book shows a gratifying increase of Oregon-owned horses included in its categories, and a more hopeful outlook for future breeding.

It is due to Mr. Wallace to say, that the sturdy honesty of his methods, and the thorough care and exhaustiveness of his tabular statements, is going far towards lifting the art of horse breeding and training from the dirt of disreputability and the mire of dishonest dealing.

PORTLAND, MONDAY, MARCH 3,

INDIFFERENCE TO PUBLIC WRONG-DOING.

The pessimist who looks longingly backward, hopelessly forward and critically upon the present finds in the calm unconcern of the public in the presence of acknowledged evils that exist an argument in favor of his dark estimate of public virtue. That there is a spirit of indifference in regard to public wrong-doing that is deserving of censure is well attested by the fact that disclosures of many forms of dishonesty and vice in a community are received seemingly without surprise or evidence of serious displeasure. There are reasons for this, however, which, while they cannot wholly excuse such manifest indifference at least show why it exists, and prove that its existence is not to be accepted as evidence of a sacred public conscience.

With some there is doubtless enough conscious partnership in the wrong to silence open condemnation of it, but that this is not usually the case is witnessed in the well known disposition of sinners to cry out against wrong-doers of their especial type whenever public occasion is presented to do so. That the large class in every community who abhor vice and loathe social impurity, suffer it to exist without a public rebuke, is partly due to a disinclination to give offense, partly from a wholesome dread of getting into trouble by intermeddling with disagreeable matters, and partly from uncertainty as to methods that would produce opposite results. Any single one of these reasons is plausible, while the combination—and it often exists—of all of them is sufficient to cause the prudent man to pass wrong-doing of the more subtle, but not the less vicious kind, with his finger upon his lips, seeing, yet not seeing it.

The sensational newspaper of a city furnishes with every issue numerous illustrations of how much rough, unkind criticism there is which hurts the feelings and damages the reputation of the innocent without doing any good; how many wholesale denunciations are hurled, without pausing to seek cause or explanation of the alleged action; how many cruel exaggerations are made in recounting the shortcomings of those who are, it may be, striving against circumstances to hold up their heads in the world. In view of all this it is not strange that humane and sympathetic people avoid altogether the discussions that open wide the door of uncharitable criticism and unkind remark.

On the other hand, however, there is a duty which each individual owes to society in the matter of exerting an influence against evil doing; and this he cannot ignore with impunity. Every one, consciously or unconsciously, is in a greater or less degree led or restrained by public opinion. As an aggregate of individual opinion this force is constantly at work moulding the conduct of the community. All law, to be effective, must follow this force, since without its sanction no law is fully executed. Besides, there is much in the way of vice that no law can touch, but there is little that would hold up its head under the ban of public opinion honestly and frankly expressed.

This is not the field of the reformer, with his aggressive ideas and distasteful officiousness; it is rather that of the quiet, self-respecting citizen who is possessed of the moral courage necessary to make him refuse to smile upon the social monster whom his conscience condemns; to refuse to grasp in friendship the hand of one from whose practices of life all his best instincts recoil; to welcome to his home one in whose integrity he has no confidence.

The sentiment so fatal to good government and social welfare, which seeks to avert the just penalty of crime, regardless of the danger to which such action exposes the community is only an extension of indifference to wrong which is a menacing power everywhere. In this connection it is not too much to say that if evil doing were the matter of intelligent concern that it ought to be no mere pity for pain, or compassion for a criminal would induce an interference in the just measures taken to suppress crime by visiting just penalty upon wrong-doers under sentence for violation of law.

THRESHING OLD STRAW.

The attention paid by intelligent, thinking men to Bellamy's "Looking Backward" is due to the fact that it is well written and ingeniously constructed. Its thought is but very old straw threshed anew. Bellamy has raised a dust, but he has obtained no grain. Plato, in his "Republic," sketches a Utopia in which family and private property are done away with, and everything, both wives and goods, owned in common. The Utopia of the millennium and the coming of the Messiah was preached by the Hebrew prophets, and Christ announced the divine Utopia when he described the kingdom of God, where "the last shall be first;" "the peacemakers shall inherit the earth;" where "blessed are those who are persecuted for righteousness' sake, for theirs shall be the kingdom of heaven;" where "those who hunger and thirst after righteousness shall be filled." Up to the year 1000 nearly all the early Christians hoped that this kingdom of God would be in this world. This belief in the coming of a new and better world is found in the Scandinavian Eddas. Sir Thomas More, in 1517, sketches a Utopia where all possessions are held in common, and every one works alternately in the fields or the workshops and factories. Six hours is a day's labor. Only useful articles are made. Nothing is bought or sold for money. The basis of More's book is Plato's ideal of a republic. Shakespeare evidently satirized the Utopia of More when he makes Jack Cade say in "Henry VI.:" "There shall be no money; all shall eat and drink on my score, and I will apparel them all in one livery that they may agree like brothers."

In 1623 a Calabrian monk, Campanella, sketched Utopia in his "City of the Sun," where men and women are all engaged in work of some kind, but each individual in accordance with his or her aptitude and capacity. Women and children every day practice music. There are no poor nor rich, and four hours a day provides the necessaries of life for all, because idleness is unknown. Equal consideration is shown to all branches of occupation, and each branch of production is under the direction of a manager, who assigns to each his post. Everything is in common—wives and goods. Another Utopia, "The History of Severambes," was published in France in 1672. In our own century we find Fourier, who believed in making labor attractive by making the passions the motive powers of his new society, in which the favors of the most beautiful women were to be the reward of the cleverest and most diligent workers, thus making sexual attraction the one great incentive of the economic world. Lord Lytton, in his novel, "The Coming Race," sketches a Utopia that is to solve the problem of social reform. Louis Blanc, the famous French republican, exiled by Napoleon the Third, tried to realize his idea of Utopia in a workshop where his principles of equality were practiced. The wages were the same for all, and the names of idlers written on the walls. It failed because the superior workmen became impatient of the injustice which paid the same wages to workmen of inferior industry and quickness as to themselves; and a military colony, founded on a communistic footing in Algiers by Marshal Bugeaud, failed for the same reason. Emile de Laveleye, in his review of Bellamy's book, says:

> The chief objection (and this is absolute) is to the system of remuneration, which is nothing more or less than the communistic formula: From each according to his strength, to each according to his requirements; applied practically, this becomes equality of wages. Personal interest is the great mainspring of the economic world. A workman only does all he possibly can when the reward is in adequate proportion to the work accomplished. This is perhaps very sad, but it is undoubtedly true.
>
> The state could not send away a bad workman, as it can do now; for, there being no private enterprises, this dismissal would be equivalent to capital punishment. When remuneration is in proportion to the work accomplished, diligence and activity are encouraged, whereas an equal rate of wages is a premium on idleness.
>
> But, argues Mr. Bellamy, honor is a sufficient reward in itself; for men will sacrifice everything, even their lives, for it. It is perfectly true that honor has inspired the most sublime acts and heroic deeds which have called forth universal admiration; but honor can never become the motive power of work or the mainspring of industry. It will not conquer selfish instincts, or overcome instinctive repugnance for certain categories of labor, or the dislike to the wearing monotony of the daily task. It may make a hero, but not a workman.

THE HUNT PROPOSITION.

The Hunt railway proposition is now fairly before the citizens of Portland. That it would be a thing of great advantage and importance to the city and to the country as well to have the construction of the proposed road assured, needs no argument. Every additional road has its special value. The question in this case simply turns on the willingness of citizens of Portland to subscribe the bonds.

The report of the committee of the Board of Trade gives all necessary information in regard to the proposition. While the bonds may be offered on their own merits as an investment, the thing which citizens of Portland will chiefly consider is whether the interests of the city will not be greatly promoted by the completion of this additional railway line, and whether a true public spirit will not require the necessary action to be taken in subscription of the bonds.

To secure subscriptions that will cover the sum proposed will require general concert among our people. Each must be prepared to do his full part. At the meeting to-morrow the subject will be presented and discussed, and it is in every way desirable that by that time the matter may be so matured in the minds of our citizens that a definite response to the proposition may be given.

One of the Sweethearts and Wives, so fondly and fervently toasted at Alisky's Saturday night, responds to the sentiment in an unique communication, to be found elsewhere. We make no apology for printing this letter. Had it been written by a man—a great, big, blundering, stupid, dull-witted donkey of a man—it would have made a choice bit of bric-a-brac for the interior decoration of the waste basket. When a man writes a foolish letter to the newspapers, he simply writes himself down a fool—a bare, crude, unqualified uninteresting, repellant fool—and nothing besides. But the finer nature of woman lends a delicate charm, even to her foolish actions. Nothing that a woman can do is absolutely without interest to a properly constituted man. We find her not only adorable in sound mind and good temper, but attractive in her moments of unreason, interesting in her sulks and seductive in her rages. Even the Lady of the Curtains had a fatal fascination for poor Caudle, who returned to her night after night, admiring the variety and brilliancy of her verbal pyrotechnics, even while they scorched and blistered his spirit. So, when a woman writes a foolish letter, it is worth printing. Much of the charm of the letter referred to lies in its earnestness. This is the secret of the charm of feminine effort anyway—whether it is directed to shooing hens out of a garden, smashing whisky barrels or wresting the right of suffrage from the tyrant man. Our Sweetheart and Wife is in deadly earnest. Like much feminine earnestness, hers has an imaginary foundation. The good lady has acquired from that vast and formless void in which feminine intuitions are engendered, the notion that social banquets limited to the male sex are sinks of sensuality, riot and indulgence, instead of the soul-warming, wit-brightening, heart-broadening means of social education and human development, through the temperate stimulus of the senses and the active exercise of the intellect, which we all know they are. If the signature is a faithful description of the person, and the good lady is really wife, as we are sure she is sweetheart, she ought to have been taught better. The fault is less hers than her lord's—unless she restricts his means of acquiring knowledge for the whole family. We can make no better suggestion than that she carefully untie the knot in her apron strings and send him to the next banquet in Portland, taking the precaution to tie a card with the house number on it to his person. She will not only gain a fuller knowledge of the real character of male banquets from his report, but, unless his nature is impervious to the sweet and genial influences of human intercourse at its best, he will return to her a better husband, because a better fellow.

The Washington legislature will make a fatal mistake if it takes out of its constitution the wise provision forbidding the loan of the school money of the state to private persons. This experiment has been tried in many states and the result has been invariably costly and disastrous. The school fund of Oregon was sadly depleted by pursuing just the policy proposed in Washington. The money was to be loaned to farmers, on gilt-edged security, and a good revenue earned for the support of schools. In fact, it was loaned out by one gang of politicians after another to their favorites and henchmen, and went the way of all funds so recklessly handled. If what remains of the fund is more prudently managed, it is because the state had a severe lesson in its early experience and has profited by it. The principle is bad, but eternal vigilance keeps it from being entirely destructive. Washington will do well to avoid it. The state has no business to shave notes or loan money to private persons or corporations on mortgage security. There is a recognized class of investments for trust funds, which most decidedly does not include farm mortgages. School money is a trust fund of the very highest character. The legislature will have to answer to the people if it undertakes to fool it away. They may stand a little mild jobbery with tide lands, but it won't be wise for this or any other legislature to impair the inheritance of the children of the state by tampering with the security of the school fund.

Out of a sense of justice due to Hon. H. G. Struve, of Seattle, as well as from motives personal to the editor, THE OREGONIAN realizes its obligation to print the statement from him that appears in another place; in which he answers and refutes the reflections cast on himself in connection with the alteration of a word in a statute enacted during the period when he was secretary of the territory of Washington. The statements published were telegraphed at a late hour, and did not receive the attention of the editor. Had they come under his notice they would not have been published. Yet it is impossible that our correspondent should have been actuated by any malicious feeling against Mr. Struve, or by any desire to make a false report. He simply wished to furnish what appeared to him a part of the news of the day. THE OREGONIAN greatly regrets that the report was so worded as to do injustice to Mr. Struve. For this regret there is a double reason. The first is that any statement should appear in the columns of this paper that could cast an unjust reflection on any man, and particularly an honorable man; the second, that Mr. Struve has been one of the closest, most intimate and valued friends whom the editor of this paper has ever known. Between them there has been an intimate friendship from the days of their youth, which never has been interrupted. Mr. Struve, therefore, is known to THE OREGONIAN to be a man of high character, worthy of any trust, public or private. But recently this paper named him as fit and worthy for the United States judgeship in Washington, and expressed a hope that he would be appointed. The editor feels, in view of his long acquaintance with Mr. Struve, of his intimate knowledge of the man and of their close friendship from early life, that this vindication is personal to himself as well as to his friend, and hardly less necessary. And yet Mr. Struve is so widely known for high worth and honorable character as to make any testimonial really superfluous. The editor, however, could not be satisfied with merely printing Mr. Struve's statement, but wished to do himself the honor of making this reference to it and to its author.

Speaker Reed's witty but indiscreet reply to an invitation to dine with the Blue Grass club of Louisville, illustrates the weakness in his character which made it hard to elect him speaker and will make it harder to elect him president. Tom Reed is the brightest and wittiest man in public life, and he can not resist the temptation to make an epigram, no matter how it may sting somebody to resentment or revenge. His wit isn't really malicious, but duller people who are made its target find it painful. They can't respond in kind so they lie in wait to punish their tormentor in other ways. Reed is an enemy of no man living, but he has made a lot of enemies for himself by saying bright, but bitter, witty, but stinging, things to or about them. He began to deny himself the practice of this talent when he became a candidate for speaker; but he is at it again. The members of the Blue Grass club are probably clever enough to understand and laugh at his letter; but Kentucky is full of people who will think it a slur on their state.

The Vancouver Register says: "THE OREGONIAN seems to take delight in giving this city a black eye, without the slightest provocation;" that "it has conveyed the idea that Vancouver is simply a garrison where a few companies of soldiers are located, with an occasional house on the outskirts;" that "THE OREGONIAN makes us all sick with its nonsense about Vancouver, the garrison town," etc. THE OREGONIAN begs to be excused from responsibility for the incapacity of the Vancouver Register to appreciate its attitude towards that city. Portland, in fact, cherishes Vancouver as part of herself, and is as glad to witness Vancouver's growing importance as that of Oregon City. If THE OREGONIAN has spoken of Vancouver as "the garrison town," the term has been used merely as a form of designation, not with the slightest idea of holding out the intimation that nothing but a garrison is there. The paper that excepts to this phrase simply discovers its own dullness of apprehension and littleness of motive.

The statistics cited by Dr. Norvin Green in his argument before the house postoffice committee against the postal telegraph bill merely gives concrete proof to the sound abstract principle that private enterprise, properly regulated by competition, can perform any public service more cheaply than the government. Dr. Green showed that it costs the English government more money for the same amount of telegraph service than the Western Union Company receives from the public in this country. The notion that postal telegraphy can be cheap and self-supporting is a delusion.

The legislature at Olympia begins to talk seriously about adjournment. Members have business of their own to attend to and want to get home. There is a good deal of business to do yet, and Governor Ferry has set his face like a flint against adjournment before the legislation enjoined by the constitution is completed. Our own impression is that if the legislature really wants to adjourn, it can finish this necessary business in a week or two by really going to work at it. The proposition to hold three sessions a day clean up work and adjourn March 15th, is an admirable one.

From Douglas there are reports of attempted combinations to defeat Hermann in his own county for the renomination for congress. It is supposed that by bringing forward candidates in that section of the state for other offices, this might be done. Yet we suspect Hermann will be renominated, and think it not probable that the delegation from his county will fail to support him. The success of his career in congress is a strong card in his favor.

PERSONS WORTH KNOWING ABOUT.

Johann Strauss, the waltz composer, denies the report that he is to come to this country with his orchestra, and says that he will probably be unable to ever revisit America.

Ward McAllister talks as unassumingly as he dresses. He has a funny habit of interspersing his remarks with, "You see, don't you know; you understand;" but they seem to come naturally to him.

The remains of Mr. Biggar were interred at Carneymoy, Ireland. A large number of friends and sympathizers attended the ceremonies. Many of the Parnellite members of the house of commons were present.

M. Chanteloup, the brass founder, who died at Montreal, left his entire fortune to his employes, except a few thousand dollars which were bequeathed to charities. The estate is valued at $500,000. Each of the 500 workmen receives $400.

William Gilbert, father of William S. Gilbert (Sir Arthur Sullivan's collaborator), died recently in Salisbury, Eng. He was a writer of excellent attainments and published several books, on one of which Tom Taylor founded the play of "Mary Warner."

S. M. Sayford, of Newton, Mass., representing the "Student Visitation movement," of Amherst college, will soon arrive in Oregon and Washington to speak to the students of schools and colleges. He has been very successful in religious work in California.

Senator Redd of Montana, is also a physician, and it is said that most of his patients recovered during his absence. But the patience of others was exhausted during his escapade. This shows that that which is beneficial to some people frequently injures others.

It is said that Herr Possart, the German actor, before stepping on the stage, bends his body forward until it makes a right angle with his legs, shakes his head vigorously and then stands up straight again. He evidently believes that acting is one of the plastic arts.

Colonel Barney Barnds, formerly of San Francisco and New York, now a prominent citizen and real estate owner of Spokane, is in New York on a visit. He reports everything active at the front, and has almost induced a number of his friends to move their household goods to the new state of Washington.

Mlle. Clementina de Vere, the well-known concert singer, has engaged to sing in the choir of Dr. Paxton's church, New York, at a salary of $5000 a year. The trustees of the church first offered $4000 a year, but finally agreed to pay $5000, which is the largest salary received by any church singer in the country.

The Rev. John W. Farnham, the minister of the colored Methodist church at Charlotte, N. C., wears a boot the size of which is 33½, which necessitates a sole twenty inches in length and seven inches broad. The preacher stands six feet ten inches in his stockings, and weighs 410 pounds when stripped of his impediments.

Mrs. Kendal is the only actress that has ever been received socially in New York. The letters which she brought over from England insured her this distinction and though she has carefully kept the social part of her life in the background since coming here, it is a fact that the most exclusive and influential people in New York society have called upon and received Mrs. Kendal with entire cordiality.

Personal Mention.

Mr. C. G. McCord, of the Canadian Pacific, is confined to his bed from pneumonia.

Wylie Chapman and wife, of Clackamas, have been in the city several days visiting friends.

State Printer Baker, after spending several days in the metropolis, returned to Salem yesterday afternoon.

Judge W. H. Adams has just returned from a trip to Worcester, Mass., where he was instrumental in settling up the affairs of the estate of the brother of ex-Mayor Oates.

Mr. C. A. Malboeuf has resigned his position in the office of Superintendent M. G. Hall, of the Northern Pacific Express Company, to accept a similar situation in the office of Storekeeper Cunningham, of the Union Pacific.

Mrs. E. J. Winks left on the steamer last night for San Francisco. She will join her daughter, Miss Blanche, who is the guest of Mr. and Mrs. Frankbehsen. Mrs. and Miss Winks intend making the bay city their home in the future.

Persons in San Francisco.

T. H. Surprenant, Astoria, is at Grand hotel and E. R. Adams, Portland and L. P. Wood, Albany, at Occidental.

Since the railroad blockade there has been a marked diminution in arrivals of people from Oregon and Washington points.

The engagement is publicly announced here of Miss Dora Silverstone, of San Francisco, and Leon Barnes, of Portland. A reception was held yesterday.

A dispatch from San Francisco last night says: Last evening at the Sarasate-D'Albert concert at Grand Opera house, Mr. and Mrs. Ralph Prager of Portland, Miss Ray Prager, Miss Cecil Prager, and parties occupied a box.

SPIRIT OF THE NORTHWEST PRESS.

SENATOR PARKINSON'S BOOM.

Snohomish Eye: The Whatcom Reveille this week announces that Senator Parkinson will be a candidate for congress against Wilson. The carpet-bagger's boom sprouted too early in the season to ripen; besides, the rustling young representative from the bunchgrass country seems to be giving such good satisfaction to the people that the over-ambitious railroad candidate could get the nomination only by the most disreputable means known to politicians of his stamp.

GET A MOVE ON THEM.

Winlock Pilot: We are informed that the legislature will take measures at once to pass an act so that the cities and towns whose incorporations have been declared illegal can provide a legal municipal government. Over thirty incorporations are affected by this decision, and many of the citizens of the towns and cities affected are in Olympia urging haste in this matter. We trust our legislature will get a move on them.

THE INDIAN HAS A SOUL.

Helena Journal: Those who think the Indians are destitute of souls are laboring under a mistake. When the Indian scholars at the Carlisle school in Pennsylvania were told of the sufferings of the starving Indians at Devil's Lake, North Dakota, they sent $550 of their savings to buy food for them. This act of generosity was upon their own motion. Who can say they are incapable of civilization?

SIMPLEST THING IN THE WORLD.

Lincoln County Times: The problem of how to reduce the surplus in the national treasury, that has puzzled the wiseacres of the country for some time, can be solved by congress granting the appropriations asked for by the new state of Washington.

AN EXPRESSION OF DISGUST.

Vancouver Register: It is estimated that the loss of the courthouse is equal to the price of four hundred good horses, yet our city couldn't afford to own a team to pull the fire engine. Let's sell out.

SOCIAL BANQUETING.

PORTLAND, Or., March 2.—[To the Editor.]—How much longer I ask, will humanity have to suffer from "social banqueting?"

Will man never see its degrading influences? It seems not. One time after another have "our best men"—men who are heads of families, and worse than all, members of Christian churches—been gorged, stuffed and swilled, in order to show their appreciation of and to some political or judicial light.

Last night was only a repetition of many others indulged in before, where men entered and beasts came away.

One man during the jubilee offered a toast to "sweethearts and wives;" better had neither ever existed than for them to drag their names before such a howl—those wives at the same time lying awake anxiously listening for the unsteady footfalls, the sounds of which were to reach their ears and sadden their hearts in the early morning of a beautiful Sabbath day.

A revelry to last into the Sabbath of rest! Where is the coming generation to look for an example? To these intelligent (?) men of last night's debauch, or to the ignorant class? We can reasonably expect as much from the latter as the former.

These are our manipulators and law makers; some who make our city laws and some who execute them; some who can stand up to judge a drunken man and set him the very example for which he is judged found guilty and fined, excusing himself and his conscience by saying, "It was only a little 'social banqueting.'" As I said before, how long shall we suffer it?

"A MOTHER, SWEETHEART AND WIFE."

"TAXPAYER" SPEAKS HIS MIND.

PORTLAND, March 2.—[To the Editor.]—There is an ordinance now before the council to prevent the removal of buildings in that portion of the city between the river and Twelfth street and Jefferson and B streets. It will be well for persons owning property in that part of the city to take into consideration in time the cost of passing such an ordinance. It means the loss of at least $1,000,000 in buildings and tearing down and hauling away the same. Who but these same property owners made the streets and are compelled to keep them in repair? Why, then, this terrible and uncalled-for waste of property, and for whose benefit is it made? Is it to beautify the city, or is it intended to retard its growth? Many old buildings, which would otherwise be removed to make room for new ones, will, under this unjust law, remain where they are for years, thus causing the loss of another mill on or more by preventing the rise of property.

Those who call for this sacrifice, say other cities are doing the same thing. If they will look they will see that no place in the world has ever made such a sacrifice. Why is it to be done here. Is it in the interests of the railroads, or to keep the streets clear for teams, or for the benefit of business men, or is it for the benefit of the electric motor lines which are granted the free use of the streets over which they run, with the property owners to keep the streets in repair for them? It seems to me that this should satisfy the most avaricious, but it seems that they want to control all streets and property in this rich and beautiful part of the city. What are they doing to entitle them to all this? They propose to run their cars at a reckless speed, propelled by lightning conducted by life-threatening wires placed over the center of the streets, ready to kill any one coming into contact with them if they are cut or broken. They endanger property by being in the way of the fire department. Would it not be better to bury these dangerous wires under the ground or do entirely without them?

Each one of these lines undoubtedly cause to be made more lightning than the laws of nature do for the whole state. Is this a safe thing to do? Is it this unnatural and untimely quantity of lightning that causes deep snows and more rain, with higher waters, with storms, tornadoes and cyclones thrown in.

Are Manuscripts Read?

Ladies' Home Journal.

It seems a pet idea with some authors to trouble themselves over the oft-mooted question, "Are all the manuscripts which come to magazines carefully read?" There are some manuscripts that go unread, for the reason that their unworthiness is apparent from the opening page, and often from the opening sentence; or their unsuitability will be revealed from their subject-title, and it is then that the editorial decision is made regardless of the literary merit which the article may possess. The most attractive and best composed articles are oftimes the most unsuited for the magazine to which they are submitted; and therein comes the fact of correct application so often lacking with authors. But of the thousands of manuscripts sent to the magazines each year, each one receives examination, some more, some less—precisely in proportion to their relative merit, and of this authors can always feel assured. The funny paragrapher has magnified the editor's waste-basket far beyond its normal proportions. In reality but few manuscripts are consigned thereto, and those that do find their way therein richly deserve the interment. Reputable publications will always return manuscripts where postage is enclosed, except in special instances, and then the declaration is always made in some conspicuous place of the periodical. Authors, as a rule, are safer in the hands of the editor to-day than they were twenty years ago. If the literary supply has increased, so has the demand.

What Socialism Really Means.

W. S. Lilly in February Forum.

Now what are we to say to the nostrum, whereby the socialists would remedy the miseries of the world? At the outset it is open to this manifest objection that the remedy is worse than the disease. I do not underrate the gravity of the disease. But what does the socialistic proposal really mean? It means the undoing of the work of civilization. For in what does the progress of society consist? It consists in the evolution of the individual.

The history of Western civilization, whatever else it may be, is certainly the history of the growth of personal liberty and of private property. And the two things are most intimately connected, for property is but liberty realized. Socialism, as Proudhon confesses, "is apt to take its assumptions for realities; its Utopias for institutions." Its Utopias, realized, would, alas! mean barbarism. And what can be more false than some of its assumptions? Take one, for example, that "the workers produce all the wealth of society."

Does not capital, then, create value? Does it not render human labor more productive by promoting co-operation and by the use of improved machinery? It is true, also, that socialism is in direct conflict with man's natural rights; and herein is its sufficient condemnation. It is fatal to human liberty, in that it is the negation of man's most sacred prerogative, to be himself, to live out his own life. Its method is like that of the well-intentioned but unwise father, who is related by Mr. Samuel Weller to have cut off his son's head in order to cure him of squinting.

Socialism, indeed if we weigh the matter well, is but one of the many expressions of the abounding materialism of the day. It is a chapter, and a very ignoble one, in what Mr. Carlyle was wont to call "pig philosophy." It is devoid of any true notion of the organic, which is essentially rational and ethical. It would reduce the public order to a machine and would bring in an era of universal slavery, with a modicum of pigwash for all.

The Outlook for American Plays.

Professor Alfred Hennequin in February Forum.

In a letter which lies before me, I find this sentence from the pen of Mr. A. M. Palmer, manager of Madison Square theater, New York: "I am sorry to say that the numerous plays submitted to me every year are all, or nearly all, totally defective in construction." Critics of a pessimistic turn of mind may find here food for lugubrious rumination upon the decadence of the American drama, the decay of art, the corruption of taste, and the general decline and fall of the creative imagination; and I cannot find it in my heart to deny them this sweet sorrow. Yet I may be permitted to remark that, to me personally, the sentence above quoted seems the most hopeful sign of a renaissance in our dramatic art that has so far appeared on a very dark and lowering horizon. If Mr. Palmer had said, "these plays show no originality," or "the characterization is feeble," or "the plots are all stolen from the French," then there might have appeared just reason for lamentation and despair; but a knowledge of construction, as everybody knows who has had any practical experience in writing plays, is something that almost anyone can become proficient in by a reasonable outlay of time and studious application. It sustains to the art of play-writing much the same relation that grammar sustains to oratory.

How to Marry Well.

"The Duchess" in Ladies' Home Journal.

What girls should never forget is to be neat. Not primly so, but daintily so. The girl well got up, with irreproachable gloves, and shoes that fit though her gown be only cotton, yet if it be well turned out may compete with the richest, while the slovenly dresser, who scorns or forgets to give attention to details, is passed over by the discontented eye, though her gown may be a masterpiece of Worth.

A girl should learn to put her gown on properly. No creature living takes more heed of externals than your orthodox man. He may not know the price, color or material of your clothes, but he will know to a nicety whether you are well or badly gowned.

One special point I would impress upon the girls who desire (as all girls do) to range themselves well, to make a good marriage—is to be gentle. The craze for vivacity, for the free and easy style that border so closely on the manners of the demimonde, that distinguished the society of ten years ago, has providentially died a natural death. Nowadays men are sensible enough to look for comfort in their married lives. And surely the knowledge that one's future wife has a heart as tender as it is sympathetic should, and does, go far to arrange a man's decision of who shall be the partner of his daily life.

An English Delicacy.

Washington Critic.

Two thousand mummies have been shipped from Egypt to a London firm to be pulverized for fertilizing matter. The English historical critics have indulged in some dreadful hysterics over the sacrilegious depredations of despots and warriors, but history fails to contain a fact with which to parallel this. The rifling of the royal tombs of St. Denis, inspired by the frenzy of revolution, is ennobled by contrast. The desecration of the crypt at Eisler becomes a grand though tragic episode in the annals of race hatred. What commercial progress, as the expression of the advance of civilization, is not intended to do in the way of levelling everything sacred to the past of mankind, is not worth trying to think about. But, after all, commerce and civilization bestow new benefits on humanity. Strawberries in Covent garden, enriched in flavor and enlivened by juices drawn from the catacombs of the Ptolemies will be a delicacy indeed. All that will be needed to polish off the dish is cream extracted from the calcareous remains of the Mesopotamian mounds and some sugar refined from the bones of the unfortunate virgins at Cologne.

Joseph Cook on Mr. Grady.

Boston Special.

Joseph Cook devoted himself to the Southern question again to-day, and among other things he said: "An eloquent Southern orator, in a misleading and almost treasonable speech, recently carried a Boston audience off its feet, though he asserted that if you fill every election district with federal soldiers the South will yet find means to nullify the fourteenth and fifteenth amendments. For one I think Boston ought not to cheer treason. [Great applause.]

"Mr. Grady was a man of genius, and he is in his grave—De mortuis nil nisi bonum—but his principles are not in their graves, and therefore I take occasion to say that since a Southern senator threatened to call the roll of his slaves on Bunker Hill nothing has been said much more atrociously insulting to Northern sentiment than the affirmation of a Southern orator before a Boston audience that, even if the nation were to put forth its whole military power, the South would yet trample on the newest paragraphs of the constitution. [Applause.]

"It is calling the roll of slaves on the loftiest tribunes of our political history, on the heights of the constitution itself, and the slaves are those who cheer such treasonable sentiments." [Great applause.]

Conkling's Story of the Blizzard.

Washington Post.

The following autograph letter from the late Roscoe Conkling to a friend is most characteristic and will be read with interest.

NO. 2 WALL STREET, March 15, 1888.

My Dear Sir: Bless your kind soul, you know now that one can't step into the snow without stepping into the newspapers. I had an ugly tramp in the dark—the lights out—from Wall street up over drifts so high that my head bumped against the signs, and dugouts opposite the store doors suddenly letting a wayfarer down a foot or two, over fallen snarled telegraph wires and slippery places, with a blizzard in front not easy to stand against, and so cold as to close the eyes with ice, and drifts were not packed enough to bear up, in which one sank to the waist. Bumps and falls and strains and tugs made it quite an interesting excursion—but not one worth anybody's while to talk about. But many thanks to you for asking about it. * * * I hope you and yours are well. Cordially yours,

Business Methods at Constantinople.

Eugene Field.

When he was in London some months ago Mr. M. E. Stone, of your city, told me of an amusing experience he had in Constantinople. He wanted to draw some money in that city, but upon going to the bank he found that institution closed because it was Friday, the Mussulman's Sabbath; the next day the bank was closed because Saturday was the Hebrew Sabbath; of course Sunday was observed out of respect to the Christian religion, and it happened that a national holiday fell upon the following Monday. To leave out of reckoning the numerous national holidays, banks in Constantinople are open to business only four days in the week. When they are open they transact business very leisurely; about an hour is required for the cashing of a draft or a letter of credit. When a customer comes in he hangs his hat on a peg, sits down at a table, sprinkles himself with oriental insect powder, reads the papers and smokes until his turn to be waited upon comes. This tediousness is also the bane of the banks in many of the German cities.

Not Burned at the Stake.

Chicago Herald.

A French historian asserts that Joan of Arc was not burned at the stake, as is commonly believed, but retired to an obscure village in France, where she married and had several children, many of whose descendants are still living. So perishes another long held belief. Posterity has a ruthless way of dealing with the cherished traditions of the past. The present age no longer believes the William Tell and the apple story; the Pocahontas incident is shown never to have occurred; the existence of Shakespeare himself is doubted, and posterity may even deny that such a man ever lived as Ben Harrison, and attribute the imperishable results of his statesmanship to John Sullivan or some other man.

The Worm Will Turn.

Philadelphia Inquirer.

"Has that yellow-haired dude been around here to-night?"

"Not yet. Why, papa, what in the world is the matter? Did you miss your footing on the train, or—"

"No, I didn't miss my footing on the train. I undertook to gently remind that dude of yours that he wasn't wanted here, and this is the result. When he comes to-night tell him he can have you, and he can't have you any too quick to suit me. A man who can use his hands like that fellow is protection enough for a dozen women. If he asks for me, tell him I've gone to Africa or Canada, and won't be back until the marriage has blown over."

The Political World is Beginning to Bestir Itself.

THE SCHOOL BOARD ELECTION

The Facts About the Cable Company's Recent Accidents.

LUCKY CAPTURE OF A BURGLAR

Mr. L. Hirsch's Residence Invaded—Among the Pugilists About Town—The Lower Willamette's Channel.

School election is coming on a week from today. The polling places and judges and clerks of election have already been published in THE OREGONIAN. The clerk contest seems to be a walk-away for Mr. H. S. Allen, who is said by the board to have been the best clerk they have had for many years. The directorship, since Mr. C. M. Wiberg has positively refused to run, has narrowed down to Hon. D. P. Thompson and Mr. Joseph N. Teal. Mr. Thompson has served one term and his actual position, as stated to a reporter is, that while he is not seeking the office, he will cheerfully qualify and serve if elected. Mr. Thompson views the office of school director precisely the same as he does jury duty. His name is on the new county list of 200 jury names, and when Judge Catlin told him he had been drawn he said "all right, I'll serve." Mr. Thompson's position in the matter is a very creditable example to those citizens who wear the life out of judges in their efforts to escape jury duty. Mr. Teal's candidacy, on the other hand, bids fair to be popular among many. He is urged by democrats who make the point that there is no democrat on the school board, and by the Hebrews, who naturally wish for a representation.

THE GENERAL ELECTION.

A well-defined movement is on foot in republican circles, as usual, to defeat Hermann for the renomination. Eastern Oregon, which has, with well-concealed misgivings, gallantly come to the support of Hermann in the past two congressional campaigns, will be duly worked upon to ask for another man.

The governorship will be sought for by a number of candidates, who are chiefly in the dark as yet.

Secretary of State McBride and Public Printer Baker will each be candidates for re-election.

State Superintendent of Schools McElroy is accredited with a wish to serve again. Superintendent Wetzell, of Multnomah county, would undoubtedly have sought the place, had it not been for his recent domestic trouble.

IN MULTNOMAH COUNTY.

All the present incumbents in the county seem to be willing to serve the dear people again, unless, perhaps, Judge Catlin and Assessor Harold, who have intimated that they would not be candidates. The affairs of the county, however, have been uniformly in good hands, and have been, as a whole, wisely and economically administered. District Attorney McGinn will be more invincible than ever. In fact, no democratic contestants have yet come to the surface for the county offices. The expense of the campaign is quite an item, particularly in the offices of sheriff and clerk, and candidates are not popularly expected to scramble for the nomination. The great difficulty promises to be, as last year, to find good men who will accept the democratic nominations and make the proper fight for election.

SEVERAL SLIGHT ACCIDENTS.

Some of the Cable Cars "Fetched Up Mighty Short"—Scratched and Shaken Up.

The cable cars were running to the Heights yesterday and were crowded all day long. No one appeared to have any apprehensions of danger, and all enjoyed the ride and the beautiful view afforded. The company have taken every precaution possible to guard against any further accident on the hill, sending four men up and down with each car. They have also two gripmen coming up on the steamer who have had long experience on the hills of San Francisco, which are much steeper than the road to the Heights. As far as the hill goes, everything worked like a charm, and the confidence of the people was completely restored.

On the "lower levels," however, a trifling accident happened in the forenoon near Fifth and Jefferson, and another in the afternoon on Alder street. These accidents seem to have been the result of carelessness or inexperience. A grip in some manner struck a pulley and knocked it out of place, and the next car which came along was brought "up all standing." The conductor, standing on the rear platform, smashed a window and received severe scratches, and the passengers were slightly shocked, but no one was injured in the first accident. In the accident on Alder street another window was broken and the pieces of glass inflicted slight cuts on some of the passengers, and a lady was severely shaken up and hurt by the sudden stopping.

These accidents were greatly magnified by rumor and are very annoying to the company. They have one of the most substantially built roads in the country and first-class cars, and there should be no necessity for such accidents and no excuse for them. If there is to be any more of this sudden stopping business the conductors will have to wear baseball masks.

In this connection it may be said that Mr. J. M. Thompson, who has the contract for completing the cable road, is expected here very soon, and that work will be begun on the remainder of the Fifth street line, from Alder to H, forthwith. He has telegraphed to have the Belgian blocks in readiness, and it is probable that work will be begun by the middle of the week.

THEY CAUGHT THE BURGLAR.

A Demure Looking Chinaman Made Himself at Home in L. Hirsch's Residence.

About quarter to 10 o'clock last night a strange Chinaman was found in the servant's room in the residence of L. Hirsch at the corner of Fourteenth and G streets. The family were in the front part of the house, and the presence of the Chinaman was not known until the servant, who had been away, went into her apartment to change her dress. She discovered the Chinaman complacently sitting in a rocking chair, and at once gave the alarm.

Mr. Hirsch, fearing that the Chinaman might be armed, went out for assistance. The Chinaman, in the meantime, ran down the stairs into the basement and out the back door across the yard, where Mr. Hirsch's attention was again called to him by the barking of a little yellow dog. The Chinaman ran along Fifteenth street to F and then up F to Sixteenth, closely pursued by Mr. Hirsch. At the corner of Sixteenth street the Chinaman was intercepted by F. H. V. Andrews, who took his captive into the residence of his father F. V. Andrews, No. 368 G street.

The Chinaman was very much frightened, and pending the arrival of officers, who had been telephoned for, he was put through a rigid cross-examination. Nothing could be learned from him, however, beyond the fact that he was a mission Chinaman. He evidently meant to convey the idea that he was a Christian, thinking that with this credential he would be exempt from prosecution.

At the city jail he was relieved of several dollars in silver, two packages of tobacco and several boxes of opium. He had no stolen property on his person, but his object on entering Mr. Hirsch's residence was evidently not in accordance with the highest moral laws. He was booked under the name of Mission John and will be arraigned on a charge of burglary in the police court to-day.

INTEREST IN THE COMING CONTEST.

Both Conley and Flaherty Are in Training—Their Records—Fight at Astoria.

The enthusiasm of Portland sports, which has been allowed to lapse into a state of innocuous desuetude, in the absence of any excitement in athletic circles, is again stirred by the coming fistic contest in the Mechanics' Pavilion, Saturday night. M. C. Conley, more familiarly known as the "Ithaca Giant," and Dave Flaherty will enter the ring to settle the question of superiority with regulation gloves according to Marquis of Queensbury rules. The articles of agreement were signed some time ago, and both men are in active training. Considerable interest is centering in the match, as both men are good fighters and each is determined to win. Then too, a contest between heavy-weights always is a drawing card, for the professionals in this class are not so numerous as in the other classes.

BATTLES WON AND LOST.

Conley is a well developed athlete, weighing when in fighting condition 185 pounds, and he stands five feet and eleven inches in his stocking feet. He was born in Towanda, Pennsylvania, and is 31 years of age. Commencing as an amateur in Cincinnati in 1884, he soon developed a remarkable cleverness with the gloves, and few could beat him in friendly sparring contests. His first fight was with Jack Ashton in New York. It promised to be a lively mill, but at the end of three rounds the fight was stopped by the sheriff. Next he knocked out Professor Harry Umlah, of New York, in three rounds, winning a purse of $800. He then signed a contract with John H. Clark, the light weight, who was at that time running a theater in Philadelphia, to meet all comers for four months. During that time he fought twenty three men, and stopped each of them inside of four rounds. Among the most noted of

THE WATER QUESTION.

It Is a Very Important One to East Side Residents.

A GENERAL STATEMENT OF FACTS

Old Contract Existing Between the Companies and City Authorities.

WHAT THE COMMISSIONERS DID

Rates Charged for Water—Various Questions Now at Issue—Company's Side of the Matter—Interviews—Etc.

The most important questions that are now being considered by the East Portland people, are the sewerage and water questions. On the former question, the council has already taken action. Under its direction a sewerage commission was constituted. This commission investigated the subject of sewerage in as thorough a manner as possible, and recommended that R. Herring, a famous sanitary engineer, be employed to devise a system of sewerage. The city council adopted the recommendations of the commission; and appropriated the necessary funds to pay for preparing the sewerage system. Having disposed of this question as far as it could, the city turned its attention to the equally knotty problem, the water question—a question that has been under consideration for the past two years.

CONTRACT WITH THE WATER COMPANY.

Before the 15th of Oct. 1877, the East Portland Water Company had a contract to supply the city with water for fire extinguishing and other public purposes, for the sum of $200 a month. This contract dated, for the sum of $200 a month, and terminated, extended over a period of six years, and terminated at the above date. After that date, the city and company were unable to arrive at any agreement as to what the city should be charged per month. Failing to come to an understanding, the company notified the city it would continue to charge the city at the rate of $200 per month, as in the previous contract with the city, stating the city might disconnect its hydrants if it did not want to pay that rate. This rate was to continue until terms of agreement were arrived at. By resolution offered by Councilman Murphy, the council decided to pay the water company $100 per month. Warrants have been drawn in favor of the company at this rate, but they have never been accepted, and remain in the warrant book to-day. Numerous communications and offers were received from the water company looking to some sort of an adjustment, but no understanding was reached. Councilman C. H. Rankin finally offered a resolution providing for the appointment of a joint commission to adjust and fix water rates. This resolution passed and the mayor appointed John H. Hall and Thomas R. Turnbull commissioners on the part of the city. The water company appointed S. Stuart and F. Vaughn as their commissioners. This commission met but did not accomplish anything the first month. The same gentlemen were appointed again, but the commission did not meet. The city commissioners reported to the council that the water company's commissioners had failed to act, whereupon the council appointed Cyrus Buckman and H. C. Myers to fill the vacancy. The water company made a vigorous protest, insisting that S. Stuart and F. Vaughn were ready to act, and had been ready to act at any time. However, the commission as constituted by the city proceeded, in spite of this protest, to act and fix the water rates. These rates the water company refused to accept, claiming the commission was illegal, and have continued to collect the usual rates. The regular water rates of the company, as found in their "rules and regulations," are as follows:

The commission cut these rates on an average of 40 per cent, fixing the family rate at $1 a month.

THE PRESENT WATER COMMISSION.

The next action of the common council was the appointment of the present water commission to devise means by which the city should own its own water works. Before it was appointed the water company made another attempt to secure terms from the city, offering to supply water to families at the rate of $1 per faucet, furnish water for fire protection 55 per cent. less than Portland rates, and obligate themselves to bring in Crystal Spring water, as much as 10,000,000 gallons daily, if necessary. No action was taken on this communication, and the commission proceeded to organize for business. At the first meeting committees were appointed to look into, and report on, the various phases of the water question, supply, plant, judiciary, etc. It was declared the opinion of the commission that the city should own its water works. M. Nicolai and Mr. Lesourd advocated the organization of a new company, this company to proceed with the construction of water works. The city was to contract with this company to take their plant off its hands, when the city secured the authority to issue the necessary bonds from the legislature. They maintained that such a contingent contract would be binding, and at least safe to enter into. However, to settle the matter, the question was referred to John H. Hall, chairman of the judiciary committee, to examine and report on. The various committees are now at work, and at the next meeting of the commission will present some tangible figures as to supply, cost of plant and what the East Portland plant can be had for.

This is a rapid resume of the water question, extracted from the records of the city and other sources. In order that this review shall be as fair and impartial as it is possible to make it, the water company's side of the question is given. Those who have talked of the matter concede that the water company has supplied a fine quality of pure water, and that this has aided in the growth of the city, the only point against the company being that the supply is inadequate. The company meet these objections in the following statement, which was obtained from an officer of the company:

THE WATER COMPANY'S SIDE.

It is pretty generally known that the contract between the city of East Portland and the East Portland Water Company terminated on October 15, 1883, since which time the company has received no revenue whatever for the water used by the city for fire protection and other purposes. Previous to that time the city had paid the water company the sum of $200 per month for six years, and had received an adequate supply of water wherever the company's mains extended, a supply that was and is practically inexhaustible, and of a pressure in the business part of the city that would throw water from the fire hydrants over the highest buildings. The rates for private consumption were the same as the rates charged by the Portland Water Company at that time, and are practically the same yet, although the rate for the first faucet is discounted 25 per cent. if paid by the 10th of each month in advance.

This action was voluntary on the part of the company, and was commenced in September, 1886, after which, for over a year, the people of East Portland enjoyed a lower rate for water than those of Portland did. After the rates had been reduced in the latter city, there was some complaint from water consumers in East Portland, who wanted a further reduction, and the matter was talked over by the officers of the company and the council committee on fire and water. The result of the conference was an agreement upon the terms of an understanding that water rates would be reduced about 25 per cent. This understanding was reached about eleven months ago, but, before the succeeding meeting of the council, the company received word that it was desired to postpone the matter until after the then approaching city election, which took place on June 17. The election of a new council brought with it a new fire and water committee, with whom the company held several meetings, the result being that the

FORMER TERMS WERE AGREED UPON,

The conditions of which were substantially these: The city to give the company a contract to supply water for the fire hydrants and other public uses for twenty-five years at a rate for the entire period which would be 55 per cent. less than the city of Portland now pays for the same service. The committee, for some reason known only to itself, never reported the matter to the council in the proper manner, and the company had an ordinance prepared embracing the above terms in full. This ordinance was read a first time, and then allowed to die an ignominious death in the hands of the same committee, to whom it was referred. Nothing further was done in the matter until it became apparent that the council would do nothing, when the company sent a communication to the city fathers which proposed the following rates, the same being a still further reduction: The price to be asked for first faucet in one family of six persons or less to be $1 per month; family water closets to be 75 cents per month; and family bath tubs to be 50 cents per month, each. The company further agreed, in consideration of a contract as mentioned above, to bring into the city a guaranteed supply of 10,000,000 gallons of Crystal Spring water daily, if necessary, by the laying of over four miles of large mains and the erection of a new pumping station, at an estimated outlay of $125,000. The company further agreed to give a bond for the performance of its contract, and to reduce the rates to the above-named figures at once upon the signing of the contract. The communication was received with silent contempt by the council, who finally disposed of the matter by laying it on the table. Later on another communication was sent to the council, renewing the proposition and further offering to pump Willamette river water into the city for Portland prices. These offers met the same fate as their predecessors did, and thus the matter stands at present. The company still stands ready to do as it has proposed, and will do still more: It will extend its mains all over the city wherever consumers can be had, and will proceed to pipe Holladay addition, which is now the Sahara of East Portland, and yet the best residence property on the East side.

In connection with this statement it may be of interest to the public to know that there is not a city in the northwest excepting Portland, which pays less for its water than does East Portland. This company knows the rates of all, and, in most cases, the rates are about 25 per cent. higher. It may also be interesting to know that several large cities elsewhere, notably Denver, have just closed a contract with its local water company for twenty years, the company to receive the sum of $35 per year each, for one thousand hydrants and to own the same. The rates to private consumers are not to be changed for five years, after which time they will be reduced.

INTERVIEWS ON THIS QUESTION.

A number of gentlemen were talked with upon the subject, and from these interviews, the following are given:

Dr. Josephi—I am in favor of the city owning its water works, because better and cheaper service is rendered the people in this way. As to the best way to bring this about I have not fully made up my mind. Regarding the organization of a new company, this company to turn over to the city the plant it may establish at some future time, I do not think it would be the safest way to proceed. There are so many contingencies in such a procedure that I cannot regard it as the best way. The city can only issue $25,000 bonds now, and will not have the right to issue more until the legislature grants it. A contract to buy the water plant must be a contingent one. The city might refuse to take the plant, or, the legislature might refuse to grant the city the right to issue the necessary bonds. However, if such a company should be organized, I shall encourage it as far as I am able; but do not regard it as the best way to proceed. I think the East Portland Water Company should be treated with fairness, and do not believe they should be driven to the wall nor crushed out. I should pay them what their plant is worth, no more, and no less. The water supplied is excellent and there never has been any complaint about it.

Mayor Stewart—As chairman and a member of the water commission, I am in favor of organizing a company for putting in water works as soon as possible, and securing a water supply from wells or springs. If we had but a month or so to wait for the legislature to meet, I should favor delay until the legislature assembles and gives the city privilege to issue the necessary bonds, but it is a long time—a year—before the next session of the legislature is held. Hundreds want city water who cannot now obtain it, and this retards the growth of the city. Many come to me and say: "If you had adequate water supply and sewerage system, I should move over to East Portland." I should feel it my duty to protect the city in case a new company is formed against any possible complication. I should insist on an arrangement by which the new plant, if established, would be turned over to the city at cost and interest. I would incline to buy out the present company's plant for what it is worth, secure a water supply and go ahead with the work at once. I think the company will be organized, and the work will be proceeded with as rapidly as consistent with good business judgment.

Joseph Paquet—I am in favor of the organization of a new water company, and putting in ample water works. I think this can, and will be done. Money can be secured for this purpose. I have thought of this matter a great deal, and have a plan for water works. I would secure a site for water works near the river, say on Clinton & McCoy's grounds, and sink wells. A supply could be procured in this way, and the reason I would locate the works near the river is because it would be an easy matter to pump from the river in case an emergency should arise. The stand pipe could be located on the hill above Judge Woodward's residence on Brooklyn Hights, as this would give ample pressure in all parts of the city. From the stand pipe a main—12 or 18 inch—can be conducted along Sixteenth street through the entire city, and from this main supply pipes could radiate every few blocks. I would advise that the city supply its own electric lights, and I think this can be done very easily. A dynamo could be placed in the engine house of the pumping station. The same boiler that runs the pumps could be used to run the dynamo engine. This would be a great saving; the city could save enough in this way to operate the water plant.

M. M. Hunter—I should entertain and consider any proposition that is fair from the East Portland company. If this company will contract to supply water as cheaply in East Portland as Portland, I would advise such proposition to be seriously entertained. I do not think prejudice should cut any figure in this matter.

J. G. Warner—I should favor the city owning its water works. Would take a share in a company such as is proposed.

Thomas Hislop—I am in favor of the city owning its water works. I think the supply should be ample. The new company will organize. The commission means business, of that I am confident. I shall do all I can to facilitate action. [Mr. Hislop stated before the commission he did not think the commission should consider water works that would cost under $150,000.]

John Kenworthy—While I am in favor of the city owning its water works, I am opposed to the organization of another water company. I would advise the city waiting until the legislature convenes, then go before that body and obtain the right to issue the necessary bonds. This would end the possibility of trouble that may arise under any contingent contract the city might enter into with a new company to take the plant at some time in the future. Human nature is the same the world over, and we might have serious complications with the new company. I think it would be best to wait, and in the meantime make every arrangement that can be made.

J. J. Murphy—I am in favor of the organization of a new water company now. This company to enter into a contract with the city to turn over the water plant to the city at cost. The same thing would occur to defeat an amendment to the city charter in the legislature that defeated the Bull Run water and consolidation bills at the last session. If we wait for the legislature to meet, with the hope of getting desired legislation upon this matter, we will continue to wait as long as there is any money in the hands of those opposing this city owning its own water system. Now is the time to act, and it is useless to further delay prompt action.

Cyrus Buckman—I am in favor of immediate action looking to the city owning its water works. I consented to become a member of the water commission with the understanding that action would be taken to put water works.

Raymond & Wagner—The city should own its own water works at the earliest possible moment. We do not think anything would be gained by waiting a year for the legislature to meet.

A great many interviews could have been secured, but these are sufficient. Nearly all expressed the opinion that the water company should be treated with entire fairness. Many expressed the belief and hope that some amicable arrangement may be made with the company.

PRESENT AND FUTURE NEEDS.

If any one supposes East Portland can be easily piped and supplied, an examination of its extent will at once dissipate that idea. The city is fully three and a half miles north and south and one mile and a quarter eastward. Suburban villas are springing up along the borders of the city in all directions, while within the city limits fine residences are rapidly filling up the vacant places. Provisions must be made for supplying this vast and growing territory with water and eventually with sewerage. The probable cost of all this runs up into the hundreds of thousands, but it all must be accomplished.

Close Call for the Child—Car Burglarized—Candidates Nominated—School Meeting—Personal.

During the past few days the Montgomery slough has been covered with a thin coating of ice, and nearly every small fellow in town has tried to see how often he could skate across without breaking through. Saturday evening, about 5 o'clock, after the boys had gone away, a 9-year-old son of Engineer Dean thought he would have some fun skating, too, and struck across the slough near the railroad trestle bridge. About the middle of the pond the ice broke and he fell through into the cold water and slush up to his chin. The engineer on a freight train crossing over the bridge heard his cries and the train was stopped while all hands turned out to help the boy out of his perilous position, as he was sinking deeper in the mire.

Ropes and planks were thrown out to him without any advantage and no one seemed to know what to do. Just then a young man named Spidell, who drives a wagon, came by and taking in the situation pulled off his coat and rushed into the slough, breaking the ice as he went, until he reached the boy and then brought him safely ashore, nearly frozen to death. There have been several small boys who have had narrow escapes from drowning in this slimy, filthy pond. This is the much-talked-of slough that during the summer time breeds malaria and in the winter time and high waters causes great anxiety to parents of small boys, who will sneak away from home to play in the water or take a plank and paddle around. The city council should take action on this matter and have it properly drained before the summer season is here.

PROMISING YOUNG JAILBIRDS.

Several nights ago a freight car loaded with merchandise from the East, which was sidetracked near the grain elevator, was broken into by a gang of boys and a number of articles stolen, as shoes flour, etc. Officer Curtin was notified of the fact and soon had a clue to the guilty parties. Some of the parents of the boys were interviewed and the stolen goods demanded, which were delivered up. In the meantime some one notified the boys, who were at school, and they skipped out of town in double quick time and thus far have avoided arrest.

NOMINATING CANDIDATES.

Last Friday evening a few citizens met in a store on Russell street and held a convention for the purpose of putting in the field a candidate for school clerk and one school director. After considerable balloting Dr. Wise was nominated for school clerk and C. H. Hill for director.

WILL BE OBSERVED.

St. Patrick's day will be observed in Albina, so the Ladies' Union Relief Society say, as they will give a grand calico ball in the evening and the "Wearing of the Green" will be in order.

TAKING CENSUS.

School Clerk Bleick has been busy for several days taking the school census of school district No. 31, and says the district is filling up rapidly and that there are over 500 voters.

SCHOOL MEETING.

This evening the annual school meeting will take place at the Albina school, corner of Russell street and Albernethy avenue. Matters of interest will be discussed.

PERSONALS.

Dr. W. A. Wise is the regular nominee of the citizens ticket for school clerk of district No. 31, Albina, Or.

Mrs. L. W. Loughary and Mrs. O. A. Wolverton of Mommouth, Or., are visiting Mrs. Rev. J. L. Hershner of this city.

Mr. C. H. Hill will leave next Wednesday on a trip to Anacortes to take a look around and ascertain the cause of its great boom. Mr. George Smith will accompany him.

Another Sworn Affidavit.

PORTLAND, OR., March 1, 1890.

Ann McMannus, being duly sworn, depose and say:

Going on to three years I was almost helpless. I could scarcely walk or go up a pair of stairs, or do any kind of work. I could not get my breath and every now and then I would have to rest. I thought my lungs were gone. My stomach was also terribly affected and gave me a great deal of trouble. My condition was such that I had almost despaired of any relief. I doctored and doctored and paid out to seven doctors over eleven hundred dollars and got no help. A prominent doctor in San Francisco told me I could not live two weeks. I placed myself under the care of Dr. Aborn, Fourth and Morrison streets, Portland, Oregon, and in three days he gave me instant and permanent relief. I now have a good appetite, rest easy at night. My breathing is full and free. I can walk without tire all day, and feel buoyant in spirits. I am better to-day than I have been for three years, and I am a living witness to the almost marvellous ability of Dr. Aborn in the treatment and cure of catarrh, asthma, throat and lung troubles. As in my case I can be referred to where I am stopping for a short time, and I would be pleased to receive any and all inquirers who may be alike afflicted and who may desire further proof of what Dr. Aborn has done for me. My home is in Roseburg, but for a week or more I can be found at No. 55 North Third, corner D and Third, Portland.

Not a Pimple on Baby

Baby one year old. Bad with Eczema. Hair all gone. Scalp covered with eruptions. Cured by Cuticura. Hair splendid and not a pimple on him.

Cured by Cuticura

I cannot say enough in praise of the CUTICURA REMEDIES. My boy, when one year of age, was so bad with eczema that he lost all of his hair. His scalp was covered with eruptions, which the doctor said was scald head, and that his hair would never grow again. Despairing of a cure from physicians, I began the use of the CUTICURA REMEDIES, and, I am happy to say, with the most perfect success. His hair is now splendid, and there is not a pimple on him. I recommend the CUTICURA REMEDIES to mothers as the most speedy, economical and sure cure for all skin diseases of infants and children, and feel that every mother who has an afflicted child will thank me for so doing.

Lots 25x100 are now offered at $60 each. This addition is situated on a bench, where the main ridge turns, and is neither on the highest ridge nor in the swamp bottom. The lots vary in height from 80 to 200 feet above the Columbia river. There are no rocky cliffs to make grading of streets costly. Lots 25x100 in additions adjoining this are now selling for $80 each.

Port Townsend

Washington,

[illegible]

Reasons Why Port Townsend Is Destined to be a City of Great Importance.

REASON 1: It has the best harbor of Puget Sound, from Cape Flattery to Olympia, having the most convenient anchorage over the greatest area, from 5 to 15 fathoms deep, with the best holding ground. There are no bars, shoals, rocks or hidden dangers of any kind throughout the entire bay, which is land locked and well sheltered from the stormy winds and from the heavy ocean swell.

REASON 2: Ease of approach from the ocean. A sailing vessel can run direct from the ocean to the anchorage in Port Townsend Bay, with a westerly wind, or beat up to her anchorage with an easterly wind, the Straits of Fuca being over 12 miles wide, while above Port Townsend to any of the cities the navigation is more intricate, requiring the constant use of tugs. Steamers can run the distance from the ocean to Port Townsend during the densest fogs by aid of their compass alone, there being no hidden danger to apprehend.

REASON 3: It is the port of entry of Puget Sound, and its geographical position is such that it will afford greater facilities to commerce over a greater extent of country than any other position on Puget Sound.

REASON 4: It is at the entrance to Admiralty Inlet and within the lines of the proposed military works for the defense of Puget Sound, and is where the naval squadron will have a rendezvous, and where the government will build a dry dock for repairs, and a naval station for supplies for our naval vessels and the merchant marine.

REASON 5: It will become the great wheat shipping point on the Pacific Coast. It has been ascertained that from the junction of the Snake and Columbia rivers to Port Townsend there is a fall of about 400 feet, and that it is practically very nearly a level grade and that one engine can haul 20 loaded cars to Port Townsend, while it takes two decapod engines to haul 4 loaded cars through the tunnel to Tacoma. The peninsula which lies between Port Townsend and Port Discovery harbors, presents on both these harbors a greater extent of water front than any other position on Puget Sound, both of which can be utilized by one line of railroad, thus offering greater facilities for handling vast quantities of wheat than can be found elsewhere in the whole country.

REASON 6: It will be the headquarters and great point of transit of all the whaling fleet, which can here ship all their oil and bone to Eastern markets, and save 700 miles of ocean travel, which they now have to take to transport these products to San Francisco.

REASON 7: It will be the headquarters of the fishing business. The Union Pacific Railroad Co. stated to the senate committee on relations with Canada who were here in 1880, that they intend putting in refrigerator cars to take fresh fish through on the long haul at greatly reduced rates, and will here ship all the salmon pack, as well as other fish products destined for the interior and Eastern markets.

REASON 8: It is the point of departure for all passengers and freight to British Columbia and Alaska, and its unrivaled scenery makes it the admiration of all tourists who have ever visited Puget Sound.

REASON 9: It is the location of the smelting works of Irondale, on Port Townsend bay, where the best charcoal iron known in the world is produced. A plant will be put up at these works by the company to manufacture steel plates for boilers and for building vessels, steel rails and all iron material required for railroad construction, and every kind of iron for blacksmith use.

REASON 10: Port Townsend, by its geographical position, is intimately and directly connected with Portland, being due north, as can be seen on any map. The Willamette meridian, which commences in Portland as its initial point, terminates in Port Townsend bay, between Point Hudson and Marrowstone Point. The Port Townsend Southern railroad will soon connect the two cities, and Port Townsend will become in fact one of Portland's most important shipping points.

REASON 11: Because on the peninsula between Port Townsend and Port Discovery bays will be built within the very near future the most important city on the Pacific Coast, a city that will be fostered and developed by the Union Pacific railroad, which will here have its grand western terminus, from whence will proceed lines of great ocean steamships which will bring in the commerce of Asia and China and the south seas.

NEW ACADEMY DEDICATED.

Archbishop Gross Conducts the Interesting Ceremony Yesterday Afternoon.

Scathing Denunciation of Divorce Laws—Eloquent Tribute to Woman's History—The Exercises at the Academy Building.

The new Academy of the Sisters of the Holy Names, at Fourth and Market streets, was dedicated yesterday afternoon by the Catholic clergy of the city and vicinity, Archbishop William H. Gross presiding.

The hour set for the dedication in the very neat cards of invitation which had been issued for the occasion was 3 o'clock, but long before that hour hundreds of ladies, gentlemen and children had assembled at the academy and were shown through the schoolrooms, halls and other apartments of the building. The general sentiment was one of delight at the admirable accommodations of the handsome and commodious structure, the airy and well lighted condition of the rooms, and the well-ordered character of the modern improvements noticed throughout.

At 3:20 the opening notes of the organ voluntary sounded through the beautiful little chapel, and Archbishop Gross, followed by Father Rauw, chaplain of the school, as cross bearer, and Revs. Father Gibney, O'Dea, Hennebery, Grussi and Verhaag (of East Portland), the attending clergymen, emerged from the vestry upon the altar steps. The dedicatory prayers were then said, the girls of the school occupying the center aisles of the chapel.

The clergy next moved into the assembly hall, where Archbishop Gross delivered the DEDICATORY ADDRESS.

History presents many curious phases. None are more remarkable than that disparity which exists between the estimate of an event or a character at the immediate proximity and that value which history places upon the merit of the man or the event. Many a man is during his time considered a prodigy of merit, and given a high place by the historians of his time, but is found in the after cold calcium light of succeeding time to be scarcely worthy of mention. Plaudits rang in praise of Elizabeth, "the virgin queen," but to-day no man of knowledge can be found to accord her that title. Many an act which at the time was not considered of more than a passing interest, like the falling of a leaf in the forest, at the time of its occurrence, has proved in the lapse of time to be the point around which great destinies hung and great movements had their birth.

It was not a great factor in the history of Galilee that the son of a humble carpenter gathered about him twelve followers as humble as himself, and imparted to them teachings of this life and the life to come, but history has shown that the acts and the teachings of that humble Nazarene were to revolutionize, and have revolutionized the world.

And so it is in every age. Each age in succession pronounces its tenets to be the most worthy and wonderful. The age of reason so called by its chief exponents proves now to have been the age of fools, and a time when men had lost their senses. The French revolution has proved itself an epoch whose philosophers have proved themselves a laughing stock to thinkers and its heroes a blood stained rabble of the vilest sort. Sir Thomas More and John Fisher, how unremarked they died, and yet how glorious their memory among Protestant, Catholic and infidel!

What will the historian of the future say about our age, the nineteenth century? One thing he must charge up to our account, the degradation of woman exceeding that of any age in the history of Christendom. It was in the nineteenth century that England, France, Italy, and Germany first passed general divorce laws. It was in the nineteenth century that the United States extended all over its domain the facile methods by which divorce could be obtained. It is not within the province of my time to tell how easily divorces may be obtained in these United States upon almost any pretext, and with the consent of both parties to the divorce. All this means the degradation of women. The marriage ceremony too can be performed by any magistrate or squire. The briefest reflection must convince anyone that marriage has degenerated into one of the [illegible] of modern civilization. Female writers, too, have given utterance to sentiments which are a shame and a disgrace upon womankind and which I could not in duty to my office as archbishop repeat in the presence of these young girls. It is my duty to protect the girls and women who offer themselves to the church and its schools. Especially we should care for the chastity of our young women. A woman may have great physical beauty, she may have talent and wealth, but if the charm of personal chastity be lost nothing can suffice. How many men do we read of who have murdered a sister for his offense! How many men will run the chance of hanging or imprisonment rather than wed a woman who has lost her chastity!

How well I remember as it had been but yesterday, when as a boy at college I rode with my fellows upon that beautiful expanse of water, the Chesapeake bay. The lighthouse sends its light over the bay. Now, close at the light it looked very small, but far away over the bay its rays spread into a thousand reflections and radiations. So a small event in history will flood all history with a flood of light.

The archbishop then paid an eloquent tribute to the state of his birth, Maryland, and to America, the land of his nativity. He proceeded to mention the small beginning made by John Carroll, the bishop of Maryland, with only twelve priests, and showed how the work had gone on without funds, cathedrals, colleges, schools, and almost without churches, to a glorious fruition.

I stood in Rome at the grave of that martyr of the early Christian church, St. Cecilia, in whose veins flowed the blood of the Scipios. I stood at another shrine of St. Agnes, and I stood where her pure blood flowed out for the cause of Christ, and I remembered how the church first took woman from her low estate as a slave to man's appetite and lifted her up to her proper place. The archbishop referred feelingly to Mother [illegible]'s work in founding the order of women which has gone on to grow, and to take charge of and nurture the little girls which are to be the future wives and mothers of the land. He referred in glowing terms to the life and death of Sister Theresa, Clair, Catharine of Siena and assured his hearers that there was no necessity for woman to [illegible] church among the noble women of its history.

For nearly five years I have been archbishop of this diocese, and I have only words of commendation for the work of the sisters here. He reviewed in an appreciative way the work of the sisters, following upon the pioneer work of Bishop Blanchet. The work of the sisters is a [illegible]

The archbishop closed with an expression of thanks to the citizens who had come out to show their appreciation of the benefit they were to receive from the work of the academy.

After the address the procession wended its way among the various rooms of the academy. Each one was blessed in its turn, the holy water was [illegible] and the chapel was repaired to, where the benediction was sung.

STEADILY ADVANCING.

PORT TOWNSEND, Feb. 28.—[Special Correspondence.]—The real estate sales and property valuation in this city [illegible] Wednesday amounted to over $442,000, and the amount of transactions filed in [illegible]. Property is steadily advancing in value, and a large amount of outside capital, especially capitalists who are connected with various railroads, is being invested in Port Townsend realty. A few very large transfers have been recorded lately, Portland and Eastern financiers being the investors, and have given the markets a steady appearance. Property values as compared with other Puget Sound cities are decidedly inviting. All trades and business establishments are doing a flourishing business. There has been fully [illegible] stores put up this month, and still the demand is greater than the accommodations would warrant. New brick blocks have been erected and occupied before the contractors were through with the work. The city is improving and grading the principal streets and [illegible] upwards of [illegible]. A flood of activity pervades all over Jefferson county. The four lumber mills are busily engaged in manufacturing lumber, the principal portion of which is consumed in and around Port Townsend. One good indication of the city's prosperity is the absence of idle men. Everybody who wants to work has employment, and mechanics are getting the best wages paid on the Sound. Carpenters, brick and stone masons are in active demand. The government is erecting a magnificent customs and postoffice building on Washington street, at a cost of $200,000. The county is preparing to build a courthouse and jail, the cost of which will exceed $100,000. Bustle and activity pervades throughout the lower town since Port Townsend received the assurance of early transcontinental railway connections.

LOSSES OF STOCK.

A Report Covering Considerable Districts East of the Cascade Mountains.

THE DALLES, Or., March 1.—[Special Correspondence.]—Winter is still with us, having taken a very bad relapse five days since, changing in a short time from a Chinook to a raw east wind with snow and a severe freeze up, closing the river the second night and chasing the thermometer down to two degrees below zero. Since it has been gradually moderating and now has every symptom of a change for the better, but it has thinned out the herds of stockmen greatly.

Whilst the loss of stock before had been considerable the last five days have killed more than all before. In some places it has completely wiped out large herds. It has been more severe in the adjoining counties than in Wasco and Sherman, as they are more agricultural, having more hay and straw with small herds, and therefore have been able to pull through in better shape.

M. Frazier, from Willow Creek in Crook county, states that on Willow and Bay creeks most of the stockmen had feed and their losses are not heavy. The Van Houghtons had lost few out of their 20,000 sheep, but Mr. Hill, on Bay and Trout creeks, had lost 400 head of cattle out of 1000. The heaviest losses were on the Ochoco and Crooked rivers and the desert beyond Prineville, where there were but few animals left. Brown Bros. lost nearly the whole of their 15,000 sheep, [illegible] lost 7000 and many others nearly or all they had. Horses fared not so badly, as they are better rustlers and went back onto the higher ground where there is more grass and the wind whips the snow from some of the hills. It is hard to account for the heavy loss on the desert, as there is no [illegible] there in the summer so that the grass attains a good [illegible] and there is an abundance of [illegible] which the snow does not cover and which is good browsing—unless it is for the want of water. That is the probable cause of heavy losses where they have fed stock as in the Klickitat, where some have lost half their cattle, to which they have been feeding hay and straw.

Henry Blackman, mayor of Heppner, who was in town yesterday, states that the thermometer there on the morning of the 24th registered 14 degrees below zero, and that the losses up to this week were light but were increasing fast now. When the heavy snow went off stock was turned out on the green frosted grass. This last cold snap coming on with [illegible] inches of snow and feed so scarce in their weak condition they chill and perish in large numbers.

George Thompson, who has just returned from his stock ranch on the Weiser in Idaho, says his stock are doing finely. He has not lost a hoof so far. Having plenty of hay, he gathered up his stock and began to feed before they got weak, as he says it takes less to feed an animal in flesh than to keep them alive when once they get down. In this there is more truth than many give credit for. He says [illegible] through that section is something [illegible], and north of there it is worse, and that W. Bagham has lost 1900 head of horses on Crab creek, in Washington, and that Drumheller and Parker, large cattle owners on Crab creek, have been completely cleaned out.

How long will it be before men will learn that it is to their interest and more humane to keep only so many animals as they can take care of, and have them of a better quality? It is a [illegible] sight to see the helpless dumb brutes [illegible] up with the cold, [illegible] and dying from hunger in the snow.

Butler and Anderson [illegible] of mutton and beef. [illegible] they say [illegible] counties [illegible] California.

A FLOURING MILL FOR HALSEY.

Raising a Bonus of Four Thousand Dollars for the Enterprise.

HALSEY, Or., March 1.—[Special Correspondence.]—The public spirited citizens of Halsey have made up their minds that since they have their $4000 school building completed the next necessary enterprise is a flouring mill. This neighborhood [illegible] bushels of wheat [illegible] and the town has no flouring mill [illegible] eighteen miles south of [illegible].

To-day a public meeting was held. It is proposed to offer a bonus of $4000 for a mill. The soliciting committee [illegible] has over $3000 been subscribed [illegible] to show they will raise the $4000. T. J. Black, [illegible], A. S. McDonald of [illegible], C. Peil, [illegible] of Independence [illegible] and others spoke [illegible] soliciting committee [illegible] adjourned to that day.
